SEVENTEEN YEARS OF AIR TRAVEL

PLANS FOR THE EIGHTEENTH

The other evening officials at the London air-port, Croydon, were celebrating the completion of seventeen years of regular commercial air transport between London and the Continent.

It was on 25th August, 1919, that British enterprise established the world's first daily air express between London and Paris, and a few facts and figures will indicate the remarkable progress which air travel has made in the years between 1919 and 1936. For a time, in 1919, Paris was the only Continental city that you could fly to from London. To-day air passengers can book from London to more than 200 towns and cities on the Continent. In 1919 the total mileage of the world's air routes was only 3,000. To-day the figure stands at over 200,000, and is increasing rapidly.

The first commercial aircraft carried one pilot and two passengers. To-day, on the Paris route, air-liners carry a crew of four and thirty-nine passengers. The first commercial air-loads were reckoned in pounds. To-day they are reckoned in tons, while the tiny, single-engined 360 h.p. 'planes of early days have been followed by 4-engined 2,000 h.p. air-liners weighing, when fully loaded, approximately fourteen tons. The new Empire flying boats now in construction will develop 3,000 h.p., and will weigh when fully loaded nearly eighteen tons. The volume of air traffic in and out of London has grown from two or three machines a day to more than sixty; while the air speeds of about eighty miles an hour, attained by pioneer passenger 'planes, have increased on the main express routes to just on 200 miles an hour.

The air routes of Imperial Airways, which had a mileage of only about 1,700 when the company started in 1924, have grown year by year until the air liners of Imperial Airways, and of its associated enterprises are now flying over 26,000 miles of routes. The system of Empire airways, which started with a Cairo-Basra link of just over 1,000 miles in 1927, now provides services from England to Egypt, India, Africa, Malaya, China, and Australia.

As for the eighteenth year of British air travel, this promises to be the most important in the whole pioneer commercial history of the air. We are now on the eve of preliminary flights on the Atlantic route which will be a prelude to a regular service connecting England with the air-mail systems of Canada and the United States, and at the same time preparations are being completed for the great new Empire air scheme which will come into operation next year, and by which first-class mails in bulk are to be airborne from England along the main Empire routes without any form of aerial surcharge. It is for this great scheme that Imperial Airways have under construction a fleet of 28 flying-boats and 12 land-planes. Equipped with sleeping accommodation for passengers, and flying by night as well as day, these new air-liners—each of which will be capable of a speed of just on 200 miles-an-hour—will enable remarkable time-savings to be effected in Empire airway time-schedules.

At present Calcutta is 6½ days from London by air. Under the new scheme it will be brought within four days of London. A flight from London to Singapore, under present schedules, takes 8½ days. Under the new Empire programme it will be accomplished in 5½ days. An air journey from London to Sydney (Australia) takes 12½ days at present. By the accelerated service it will be reduced to 8 days, and such figures do not by any means represent ultimate air transit times. Schedules will be speeded-up progressively, as improvements are effected in ground organisation, until they are shortened probably by a day or a day and a half.

MYSTERY OF MISSING CUP

SCRAP IRON REPLACES A TROPHY

Here is a job for Sherlock Holmes or Father Brown. A bundle of rubbish has changed places with a valuable cup between England and Rhodesia. Sir Herbert Stanley, Governor of Southern Rhodesia, was to have presented a cup at the Mashonaland Turf Club's Show in Salisbury recently. When the case in which the cup was despatched from England arrived in Salisbury it was found to contain the plinth and a carefully selected collection of scrap-iron that brought the parcel up to its declared weight. The trophy had been stolen in transit. But Sir Herbert Stanley, ever resourceful, immediately ordered a duplicate cup, which arrived in time for the prize-giving.

Ex-Sergeant James Scott, of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders who left London in October, 1935, on a 12,000-mile trek to Cape Town to look for work, has found employment at Kampala, Uganda, on a new airfield. Scott, a native of Greenock, has worn out six pairs of boots during his three years' wandering.

HIGH ALTITUDE FLYING

FRENCH RECORD OF 9½ MILES

NEW BRITISH CRAFT THAT MAY GO HIGHER

EXPERIMENTAL flights, in the course of which a new world record may be set for height above sea level reached by a heavier-than-air flying machine, are scheduled to begin this month in an aeroplane built for high altitude flying research at one of Britain's largest aircraft factories. The present aeroplane height record, set only recently by the French pilot, Georges Détre, is 14,836 metres (48,670 feet), or approximately 9½ miles. How high the new British craft is expected to go is a closely-kept secret; but a new record should be well within its powers.

Flight at great heights holds fascinating possibilities, though its successful and everyday achievement depends on the solution of vast technical problems. Professor G. T. R. Hill, Kennedy Professor of Engineering at London University, has dismissed the dream, cherished by some, of travel at great heights at more than 1,000 miles an hour, but he talks hopefully of cruising at nearly 300 miles an hour at levels of around 40,000 feet as a likely achievement of the next few years. His expectations are based on available research, and the likely advance of engine super-charger development in the next year or two.

THE STRATOSPHERE LINER

Cruising at nearly 300 miles per hour, the air trip across the North Atlantic Ocean would take less than seven hours. His hypothetical aeroplane with that performance would carry nearly half a ton of useful load in addition to fuel and oil, comprising five passengers and a crew of two. Cabin and pilots' compartment are sealed and carry their own atmosphere at pressures not far below ground level pressures. Power available is 800 h.p., and the super-charging level of the two engines is assumed to be 30,000 feet, after which normal loss of power in a further ten thousand feet enables the machine to cruise economically at full throttle, but only two-thirds power, at the required travelling height of 40,000 feet.

At about 30,000 feet the aviator enters the atmospheric zone called the "stratosphere," which is a layer of air in which the temperature remains constant. There he finds tenuous air, which opposes very little resistance to the progress of the flying machine and is undisturbed by storms. The highest clouds lie thousands of feet below. Some evidence goes to show that steady winds blow at tremendous speeds in that serene atmosphere; if so, the stratosphere liner of the future, by wise choice of routes and levels, may have its cruising speed augmented by the 100 to 200 miles per hour of the stratosphere wind.

SUPERCHARGED TRAVEL

British aircraft and engine builders have done much of the research and practical experiment needed to produce the successful stratosphere machine. Chief difficulties are maintenance of adequate power output and provision of reasonable living conditions for crew and passengers at heights where the atmosphere is far too thin to support life. Cabin and engines must be super-charged; the cabin must be hermetically sealed and equipped with apparatus to generate breathable air and to exhaust or absorb used air. In a 'plane not intended to carry passengers—a stratosphere bomber, for example—the pressure cabin might be eliminated, and each member of the crew might live in a super-charged suit, analogous in its function to a diving suit.

Already British engine designers have a vast amount of information about conditions that must be met to assure safe flight at great heights. Three times has a Bristol engine powered the aeroplane holding the world height record. The Italian Donati, who held the record till it was exceeded a few days ago by Détré, flew an aeroplane equipped with a super-charged Pegasus 1,100 h.p. motor.

The new high-flying aeroplane, designed and built by the Bristol company, has satisfactorily completed flying trials equipped with an ordinary super-charged motor. A special engine is to be installed for the experimental flights, which will be made by a Royal Air Force pilot. It will drive a controllable-pitch airscrew.

HIGH SPEED AIR LINER PLANNED

Transport of ten passengers, their luggage and other cargo, at an economical cruising speed of 188 m.p.h., over a distance of nearly 800 miles, is the job of the Airspeed A.S.14 transport monoplane, plans of which were first revealed at the S.B.A.C. display two months ago.

Powered with two Pegasus X engines, the A.S.14, which is a high-wing monoplane with retractile undercarriage, is designed to reach its cruising speed at a height of 13,000 feet above sea-level, with the powerplant delivering only 62½ per cent. of maximum output. Its maximum designed speed, reached at a height of 5,000 feet, is 207 m.p.h.; its range in calm air is 790 miles, and its service "ceiling" (the level where rate of climb falls to 100 feet a minute) is 26,500 feet. Hydraulically operated flaps, fitted along the trailing edge of the wings, between the ailerons and the fuselage, reduce landing speed, with full load on board, to 60 miles an hour.

Undercarriage wheels and struts retract into compartments in the rear of the engine nacelles. Because the wings are attached at the top of the fuselage, the passenger's outlook downwards is unrestricted—an important detail that much enhances the interest of an air journey, and is provided in the monoplanes commissioned in the fleet of Imperial Airways, and others building for it. Wings form a cantilever structure of wood, without bracing struts or wires, covered with plywood. The fuselage has a welded steel tube framework, built in three sections.

In the nose of the fuselage the designers locate the pilots' compartment, fitted with full dual control for two pilots. Under control of the second pilot is the radio transmitter and receiver. Just aft of this compartment is a hold for light luggage and mails, and aft again a sound-proofed cabin. The normal load is ten passengers, but for journeys of less than 600 or 700 miles, twelve, fourteen or fifteen passengers can be accommodated. Behind the cabin is the buffet and the lavatory. Aft again is a large separate luggage hold, which is accessible only from the outside of the aircraft.

AN ECONOMIC REPRISAL

GERMAN-AMERICAN TRADE RELATIONS

In a note presented by Germany to the American Government on August 13 it is stated that in future all German measures for furthering foreign trade will cease to apply as regards the United States. This means that payment in registered marks and private clearing agreements are no longer permissible, so that American importers of German goods will have to make their payments in dollars or other crrency at the ruling of exchange.

This decision will probably lead to a further decrease in German exports to the U.S.A., which have already fallen off considerably during the last few years. On the other hand, with Germany's shortage of foreign exchange it hardly seems likely that she will be able to afford to pay for her large raw material imports from the U.S.A., and American producers of cotton, tob

VISION OF A THREE-WAY ROAD

DISTRIBUTION OF FOOD

THE PROBLEM OF EMPLOYMENT

QUAINT MARRIAGE CUSTOMS

(Special Telegram).

BLACKPOOL, Monday.

RESTRICTION of crops, the banning of motor horns, three-way roads of the future, and the question whether girls should "make-up" were among the matters discussed by a hundred speakers in the various sections of the British Association Conference here to-day.

AGRICULTURE

PRODUCING CROPS FOR DESTRUCTION

Professor J. Hendrick, President of the Agriculture Section, said that in soil science a great structure had been built up in a generation, and Britain was taking her due part in developing this branch of knowledge. But to what are we heading, he asked. Of what use is it all? Are we only increasing sorrow by increasing knowledge? Our increased knowledge should give us increased power to use the soil, and that surely means increased production. We are told that there is already over-production, and that what is required is restriction of production. We read of crops being destroyed because they cannot be used, or because it does not pay to harvest them. In the United States and elsewhere the growth of fundamental food crops, like wheat, has been restricted. In our own country arable land is decreasing, while at the same time the import of foodstuffs is being restricted. Has everybody in this country, and in every other country, too much, or even enough, food? Do we not, at the same time as we are crying out about over-production, hear an equal outcry about malnutrition and underfeeding, even in this comparatively prosperous country? The two things do not fit together. They cry out against one another. They cannot both be right. But we all know that there are many people who have not over-abundance—who have not even enough.

This is not a problem of soil science, but a problem for the statesman, the social reformer and the economist. The soil scientist can safely go on and increase our knowledge of soils, and hope that, in the long run, it will increase production and lessen labour. Increased wealth is a blessing, not a curse. It is our social organisation, our statesmanship, our economic system which are at fault when the abundance which is produced cannot be brought to the many who are in need of it.

He expressed the hope that the social, political and economic scientists would be able to remove the problem from an atmosphere of social prejudice and party bias to the calm, truth-seeking atmosphere of pure scientific investigation. Land, he declared, is not merely a playground for the city dweller; it is the fundamental producer, and the tiller of the soil is more necessary to the community than the cinema operator, or even than the coal-miner.

ECONOMIC SCIENCE

EMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

Sir William Beveridge, in the section of Economic Science and Statistics, stated that substantially the whole addition to unemployment in England since 1929 (before the depression) consisted of long-period unemployment. Short-period unemployment was probably less than at any time since the war. Social steps seemed to be called for to help older men of proved industrial capacity to find new openings and to counteract as antisocial the common tendency of employers to snatch at youth.

Frictional, seasonal and cyclical unemployment formed the natural field for unemployment insurance, a spreading of wages over good times and bad. The Unemployment Fund even to-day was paying out between £600,000 and £700,000 a week for current unemployment and was accumulating a reserve, now over £30,000,000, against depression. For long-period unemployment, whether due mainly to structural or mainly to personal causes, something other and more than money payments in idleness was required.

His conclusions were that persons recorded as unemployed month by month by the Ministry of Labour were not homogeneous They were persons of different ages, sexes and capacities, seeking employment in different industries and districts. They had been unemployed for different periods of time and they stood in different relations to the two schemes of insurance and assistance as established by the Unemployment Act of 1934.

It was as fallacious to speak of the unemployed in general as to speak of labour in general. To understand the problem of unemployment it was necessary to break it up. Unemployment needed to be analysed under many different aspects by relation to the schemes of insurance and assistance, by industries, districts, age, sex and duration of unemployment.

ENGINEERING

THREE-WAY ROADS

Three-way roads, including a central carriageway for use in either direction, according to needs, were among the traffic improvements suggested by Mr. E. H. Fryer, deputy secretary of the Automobile Association, who addressed the Engineering Section on the application of science to the solution of the road-users' dangers and difficulties. As in medicine, he said, so in engineering. First diagnose the trouble, get down to its root-cause, apply temporary remedies, and then decide upon some form of treatment which could be varied according to whether progress was going to be rapid or slow. Roads should be wide and more continuous. Dual carriageways would not be sufficient for the future. Consider the Sunday traffic between Preston and Blackpool, or London and Brighton. In the morning traffic was going to the coast; in the evening it was returning.

With a treble carriageway, the central one would be in one direction at one time of the day, and in the other direction later, the change-over being a matter for the police to decide, according to traffic conditions. The lay-out of a road, and provision for what was likely to be required by posterity, should be such that special events of great national importance could be held without unduly interrupting or interfering with the normal traffic of the day.

Mr. Fryer pictured his ideal road near London—and it might be required during the next few years.

He said—Proper and sufficient accommodation for the pedestrian, the horseman, and for the cyclist, is required. Then we will assume 'buses and motor-coaches picking up and setting down passengers, horse and motor vans collecting or delivering goods, and by classifying the traffic under three heads—horse traffic, slow-moving vehicles, private cars—we arrive at a situation where the provision of six lines of traffic proceeding in one direction is necessary.

For dual carriageways, he said, a central reserve of fifty feet was desirable. Two carriageways of sixty feet, cycle tracks, footpaths and horse roads, gave a net width for the whole of these facilities of 260 feet. Three hundred feet had been suggested as a minimum for parkways, and that was not excessive.

TO BAN THE MOTOR HORN

Miss W. Hindshaw, Secretary of the Manchester Committee of the Pedestrians' Association, suggested the experiment of banning the motor horn. It would be interesting, she said, if the experiment could be carried out in Great Britain, if only in a circumscribed area. In Finland, Sweden, and Belgium the experiment had been described as a success.

GEOLOGY SECTION

"MAN AN EXAGGERATED ANIMAL"

The following are epigrams from Dr. H. L. Hawkins's address on "Palæontology and Humanity" to the Geology Section:—

"Man can safely claim to be unique, for he is the only irrational creature in the world.

"Man stands revealed as an exaggerated animal. There are no activities, constructive or destructive, and no habits, pleasing or loathsome, in which man cannot outdo the most accomplished animal.

"The limpet was ancient before the first vertebrate appeared. Its humility has been its salvation.

"Simplicity is a characteristic of Nature, and complexity a reflex of human ignorance.

"If all types were irrevocably fixed in character, the meek would long ago have inherited the earth.

"The mating of most creatures, particularly of marine invertebrates, achieves a degree of promiscuity unattained even in Hollywood."

GEOGRAPHY

POLAR MIRAGES THAT UPSET DISCOVERY

Some puzzles in Polar exploration may find a possible solution in Polar mirage. The curious effects of this phenomenon were described in the Geography Section by Professor H. Hobbs, of the United States, who gave examples of "objects" seen clearly over 200 miles away. Such mirages, he said, explained the "under-statement of distance" which had been made by Polar explorers, and the fact that in so many instances later explorers had been able to sail over the land which they had put upon the map, and so quite without warrant bring their discoveries into discredit.

EDUCATION SECTION

"GIRLS SHOULD MAKE-UP"

Sir Kenneth Lee, of Manchester, told the Education Section that his experience of part-time day continuation schools was that they produced young people who "needed less telling." The knowledge brought into industry from elementary schools, he said, is not only negligible outside the three R's, but often very defective, particularly in regard to handwriting and arithmetic. The future security and prosperity and the very possibility of maintaining and improving our standard of living depended upon education.

Mr. W. B. Henderson, of Street, Somerset, described a debate between girls and boys at a continuation school on the subject: "Should Girls Make-up?" He said that, after an acrimonious discussion, the opinion of the boys was that girls should make-up, as it was their duty to make themselves as pleasant-looking as possible.

ANTHROPOLOGY

WIVES BOUGHT BY INSTALMENTS

Miss E. Dora Earthy, of Truro, in the Anthropology Section, described her visits to the Gbande Tribe of Liberia, where wives are bought on the instalment plan. Widows dress for a week only in banana leaves, and, by a system of bequesting wives, a man may find himself married to his stepmother. Describing the marriage ceremonies of the tribes, she said that first the bridegroom brings an initial sum of money in the currency of the country, which is iron bars. In addition to this, he brings another currency bar, the guarantee of the sum to be paid, and symbol of the marriage. Next he provides a marriage mat for his girl. He steps on the mat, surrounded by her family and relations. The bridegroom then hands over the "bride-wealth" he has brought to the bride's father, and solemnly places the iron bar on the girl's head, saying: "This is my wife."

The girl has not been told beforehand what she is to do with the iron bar, which is on her head. If she takes it with her right hand and puts it on the ground it is considered a sign that she is going to be a good and prosperous wife and will stay with her husband a long time. But if she seizes it with her left hand it is a bad omen. Brides are apparently paid for on the instalment plan, for Miss Earthy explained that the bride-price cannot be paid all at once, but half of it must be paid when required. The son-in-law is, therefore, always in debt to his father-in-law. If bride-wealth is paid, the wife goes to live at her husband's home and the children will belong to the father. Very often, however, the man pays nothing, and then he has to go and live with his wife's people and work for them.

Runaway wives are sometimes divorced and sometimes brought home and tied up for a time. A widow will take off her clothes, wash them and put them away, and wear banana leaves for the week following the death of her husband. Her hair must be shaved four times. At the end of the week she and her child, if she has one, will be ceremonially washed with medicine by an old woman, with the native doctor in attendance, after which the widow will resume her ordinary clothes.

AUSTRIAN MINISTER IN ROME

KING CAROL TO VISIT ITALY?

From Reuter's Correspondent.

ROME, Monday.

Dr. Schmidt, the Austrian Foreign Minister, arrived in Rome this evening to consult with the Italian Government. He will have conversations to-morrow with Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, and Signor Bastiniani, the Under-Secretary, and will almost certainly see Signor Mussolini.

The conversations, it is stated, are in accordance with the Rome protocol, which provides for frequent consultation between the signatories—Italy, Austria, and Hungary.

It is probable that the conference of the Little Entente now concluding will be mentioned in the conversations. Italy has watched the conference with the closest attention.

It is also unofficially reported that King Carol will pay a visit to Italy shortly.

MARTIAL LAW IN BRAZIL

THE COMBATTING OF COMMUNISM

From Reuter's Correspondent.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Monday.

President Vargas has asked the Chamber to prolong martial law for ninety days in order to permit:—

1. The operation of the Court of National Security that is to judge those detained following the events (revolt) of November last, and

2. The intensification of the campaign against Communism.

SUIT FOUND ON BEACH AT SANDYCOVE

Civic Guards are making inquiries following the discovery of a suit of man's clothing found on the beach at Sandycove, County Dublin, yesterday.

The clothes have been taken to the Dun Laoghaire Civic Guard Barrack.

No marks have been found on the clothing which might lead to identification.

New Locarno Must Include Eastern Europe

From Reuter's Correspondent.

BRATISLAVA, Monday.

THE Little Entente countries—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—to-day reaffirmed their view that any new settlement on the Continent must include Eastern Europe.

An official communiqué issued this evening at the conclusion of a three days' meeting of the Permanent Council, which consists of the Foreign Ministers of the Little Entente, states:—

"Any security system resulting from new Locarno negotiations must not be confined only to Western Europe."

Other points of the communiqué are:—

A declaration of support for the policy of non-intervention in Spain;

An expression of regret that the relations of the Little Entente with Austria have been affected by the alleged violation of the military clauses of the Treaty of St. Germain; and

An announcement that the Economic Council of the Little Entente will meet in October in Bukharest to discuss the economic reorganisation of Central Europe.

The conference also discussed the reform of the League of Nations.

GERMANY AND THE DATE

It is now certain (says Reuter) that the Five-Power Locarno Conference will not take place before November at the earliest. Prince Bismarck, German Chargé d'Affaires, called at the Foreign Office two or three days ago and intimated that, in the German view, the suggested date, October 19, would not give time for adequate diplomatic preparations.

Prince Bismarck is understood to have explained that Germany's chief interest was that the Conference should succeed. For this it was essential that there should be adequate preparation.

It is understood that no mention was made of Soviet Russia by Prince Bismarck in the course of his interview, although Germany naturally expects that, in the first instance, the Locarno Conference will be a five-Power meeting, as set forth in the London communiqué.

COMING LEAGUE MEETING

DANZIG INCIDENT CLOSED

VACANT SEAT ON THE COUNCIL

From Reuter's Correspondent.

GENEVA, Monday.

TWO questions of major political interest figure on the agenda of the 93rd meeting of the Council which meets next Friday, Danzig and the Locarno Treaty.

If Danzig sends a representative it will be some minor personality, and indeed the only question likely at present to be dealt with is the report of the Polish Government on the results of their intervention in regard to the incident of the visit to Danzig of the German cruiser Leipzig, whose officers failed to pay the customary compliments to the League High Commissioner, Mr. Sean Lester. This matter can be considered closed.

It is very doubtful whether there will be a report from the High Commissioner with regard to recent legislative measures in Danzig. Every effort will be made to keep these matters in the background.

LOCARNO LULL

With regard to the Locarno Treaty, it is obvious that with the meeting of the five Powers still in prospect, the Council cannot usefully discuss the situation or reach any decisions. It is understood that both Italy and France are not anxious for the meeting to be held soon. Both countries are concerned about the situation in Spain and are waiting for the situation there to have taken more definite shape. France is also alleged to be desirous of some preliminary talks with Germany direct.

Other questions on the agenda include the report providing for the maintenance of the extra seat on the Council now occupied by Portugal which falls vacant this year. There will be keen competition for this seat. Latvia and Austria are already pressing their candidature by diplomatic methods.

ITALY AND ETHIOPIA

It is still very doubtful whether an Italian delegation will attend the meeting of the Council. Although Italy has received satisfaction over the question of sanctions and the Mediterranean agreements, she is understood to be determined to wait and see what the attitude of the Assembly will be towards an Ethiopian delegation.

This was one of the chief points discussed by the Secretary-General on his recent visit to Rome, and it is understood that he suggested a temporary solution by which the Credentials Committee of the Assembly would reject the accrediting documents of any eventual Ethiopian delegation. It is now reported that the Duce is not satisfied with this provisional plan, but wants some more definite recognition of Italy's position in Ethiopia. An announcement on the subject will probably be made in Rome in the next day or two.

TEST ELECTIONS IN UNITED STATES

YESTERDAY'S POLLING IN MAINE

From Reuter's Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

Voters of the State of Maine turned out in record numbers to-day to take part in elections which are widely regarded as likely to be prophetic of the prospects in the coming Presidential election. "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," has been a slogan in American politics for more than a hundred years.

Mr. Louis Brann, the Democrat Governor of Maine, was contesting Mr. Wallace White's Republican seat in the Senate, and Mr. Dubord offered himself as State Governor on the Democratic ticket. His Republican opponent was Mr. Lewis Barrows, the present Secretary of the State of Maine.

Three members of the House of Representatives were also being elected.

Supporters of President Roosevelt hoped that, although Governor Brann does not support the "New Deal," his personal popularity would sway many voters from their customary Republican allegiance.

The Republicans made a great bid for victory, which they were convinced would win over for them "the man on the fence" throughout the nation. They put a formidable list of speakers into the campaign, headed by Governor Landon, their Presidential candidate. Each side made use of a large campaign fund.

A considerable time must elapse before the results are known.

DUBLIN-LONDON AIR ROUTE

INAUGURATION OF SERVICE

LORD MAYOR OF DUBLIN AS PASSENGER

BREAKFAST in Dublin, lunch in London and back in Dublin again in time for tea was the experience of a party of guests on the first Dublin-London-Dublin flight of the new air service linking the two capitals, which commenced operations yesterday.

Before the aeroplane, which was named "Eire" by the Acting Minister for Industry and Commerce (Mr. Thomas Derrig) on Saturday last, took off from Baldonnel Aerodrome in the morning, it was blessed by the Army Air Corps Chaplain, the Rev. W. O'Riordan. The machine was flown by Captain O. E. Armstrong (chief pilot of the Irish organisation which is participating in the Irish Sea Airways), with Captain J. C. Higgins as co-pilot.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin, Mr. W. H. Morton, general manager, Great Southern Railways, and Dr. E. Haslett were passengers on the outward journey, but did not return in the machine as they had business in London. The other passengers were:—Mr. Sean O hUadhaigh, Mr. T. J. Flynn, Mr. Sean Leydon (Secretary, Department of Industry and Commerce), Mr. J. P. O'Brien (Irish Tourist Association), Mr. T. O'Neill (Federation of Saorstat Industries), Mr. J. O'Sheehan (Hospitals' Trust), and Colonel C. F. Russell.

MET BY MAYORS

Bristol was reached 1 hour and 40 minutes after leaving Baldonnel, and the party was received by the Mayor of Bristol, the manager of the Airport Committee, the Bishop of Clifton (the Most Rev. Dr. Lee), who was born in Mitchelstown, County Cork, and Dr. G. E. Pepper, a former member of the Irish Aero Club, who is now practising in Bristol, and members of the airport committee.

Leaving Bristol at 11.28 a.m. the machine landed at Croydon at 12.16 p.m. The passengers were received there by a representative of the Air Ministry (on behalf of the Director of Civil Aviation), Sir Hugo and Lady Cunliffe-Owen, Mr. J. W. Dulanty (Free State High Commissioner in London), the Mayor and Mayoress of Croydon, Captain G. P. Olley (head of the English company participating in the services), Mr. R. L. Carter, Mrs. Byrne and three of the Lord Mayor's children, and Mrs. Maud Walsh.

Success to the new service was toasted at Croydon Airport Hotel at a luncheon presided over by Sir Hugo Cunliffe-Owen, chairman of Olley Air Services, Ltd., and its subsidiary, Blackpool and West Coast Air Services, which, in conjunction with Aer Lingus Teoranta, are responsible for the operation of the new service.

WELCOME AT CROYDON

Sir Hugo said that he wished to welcome heartily their friends from the Irish Free State on the inauguration of a further link between the two countries, which, they felt, could do nothing but add to a better understanding.

Mr. Sean O hUaidhaigh, chairman of Aer Lingus Teoranta, said that they were very honoured to have been passengers in the first regular Irish air service landed on the Croydon tarmac, the centre of aviation, from which air services went to all corners of the earth.

The journey from Dublin had been most pleasing, especially coming up from Bristol, in the West Country and in Surrey. He hoped that hundreds of his fellow-countrymen would see that scenery for themselves.

They were extremely fortunate in having the friendly co-operation of the West Coast Company, the pioneers of the North Irish Sea routes, and one particular sky in which no clouds ever appeared was the relationship between the two companies.

LOOKING FORWARD

They were very glad to have with them Colonel Charles F. Russell, who had been a pioneer in Irish aviation and who took part in the first international flight from Galway to Berlin.

At one end of the route they had London with its teeming millions, and at the other Dublin, which, in the last decennial census, was found to have added to its population more than the population of Cork City, and they anticipated that a couple of machines in each direction would eventually be required every day.

Mr. J. W. Dulanty, Free State High Commissioner in London said that he was overjoyed in more senses than one at the new venture. A British and an Irish company had combined in this new development—a thing that would have been thought miraculous a few years ago. It was his earnest hope that the new service would flourish.

LORD MAYOR'S TRIBUTE

The Lord Mayor of Dublin said that they had had a delightful journey. They admired the beautiful scenery, and he could tell his friends who might feel a little nervous not to have any fears. They had not experienced on the journey the bumps to be met with when motoring or on the smoothest railway line.

He was delighted to speak to the Mayor of Bristol and to remind him of Dublin's old associations with that city. He congratulated the Mayor of Croydon on the big developments there within the past ten years. Shortly after the Great War he (Alderman Byrne) had paid a visit to Croydon, but since then the number of houses in the borough had doubled, and there was evidence of progress on every side.

The Aer Lingus service would link up Ireland with the rest of the world. A man could leave Dublin at nine o'clock in the morning, arrive in Paris at 2.30, Brussels at three o'clock, Amsterdam at 4.50, Berlin at 6.10, and Copenhagen at 8 p.m. On the return journey the 'plane arriving at Baldonnel at 3.45 p.m. could be joined by 'planes leaving Berlin at 7.5, Paris at 9.30, and Amsterdam at 10.45 the same morning.

TWO COUNTRIES NEARER

That was a great day for the two countries. How near to each other the air service had brought them! He sincerely hoped that they were going to come a little nearer to one another in more ways than in aeronautics.

The Mayor of Croydon (Alderman Arthur Peters, C.B., J.P.) welcomed the new service on behalf of Croydon's quarter of a million inhabitants. It had their warmest wishes for success and was assured of their close and hearty co-operation.

Wing Commander Robertson, Chief Airport Officer at Croydon, who represented Sir Francis Shaldermine, Director of Civil Aviation, said that as far as Croydon Airport could assist the Irish service they would do everything in their power. He hoped the time would soon come when there would be three or four services in each direction daily.

Captain Gordon P. Olley said that that day's venture was the culmination of ten years' striving to link up two great cities. Olley Air Services, controlling the Blackpool and and West Coast Company, would do everything possible to ensure the success of the new service.

TOOK HIS FATHER'S PLACE

The attendance also included:—Lady Cunliffe-Owen, Captain O. E. Armstrong and Captain Higgins (chief pilots and operations managers of Aer Lingus and West Coast Services), and Mrs. Byrne (wife of the Lord Mayor of Dublin), three of his children, Alfred, junior, Carmel and "Jimmy" Byrne, and Mrs. Maud Walsh, all of whom had been on the pilgrimage to Lourdes and stayed in London to greet the Lord Mayor.

"Jimmy" Byrne, the seventeen years old son of the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who is a student at Castleknock College, took his father's place on the return journey, on which there was one ordinary passenger, a Mr. Odle.

The average speed of the 'plane was 137 miles per hour. On the outward journey the 'plane left Baldonnel at 9.13, and, after a delay of 57 minutes at Bristol, reached Croydon at 12.15. The return journey from Croydon was made at 1.50 p.m., Baldonnel being reached at 4.15.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor and director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra since 1918, died yesterday. M. Gabrilowitsch was born in St. Petersburg in 1878, and studied there under the composer, Glazunov.

COFFIN REMOVED FROM GRAVE

REMARKABLE AFFAIR IN COUNTY LIMERICK

When a man named John Sheehy was driving along the road near Ballysteen, Co. Limerick, on Saturday morning last, he discovered a coffin lying along the top of a ditch near the roadside. Fresh clay adhered to the casket, which was obviously new. Sheehy informed the Civic Guards, who found that the coffin contained the remains of John McGivern, aged about 30, who had been buried the previous day in Beigh Churchyard, about one hundred yards from the spot where the coffin was found. It appeared to have been disinterred during Friday night.

John McGivern was the son of an extensive farmer living in Ballymahon, who came from Cork and settled in the district about ten years ago. The remains were re-interred at Dunmanway, Co. Cork, yesterday.

GAIETY THEATRE

The popularity of Roy Fox and his band was evident from the large audiences at both performances last night. As to performances, they could not have been better. As these jazz bands go this is a very talented group, with every man showing wonderful versatility. They are under complete control of their conductor, and are so familiar with their work that they dispense with scores completely. Theirs is, undoubtedly, a most exhilarating show. Clever solo items were conducted by Mary Lee, fifteen-year-old vocalist, and Bobby Joy, youthful vocalist and accordian player, though in both cases the use of the microphone prevented one appraising the voices at their natural worth. George Gibbs also sings attractively, and John Blackley shows himself possessed of "dancing fingers" in a most ingenious act.

In addition to the band there is a first class variety programme in which every one pulls full weight. Bower and Rutherford quite caught the house with their breezy offerings; the lady certainly is a very accomplished artiste. There is something of the pre-war style about Bert Weston, described as "the idiotic inebriate;" his songs have an old-world flavour. Leon and Kiki prove as clever as ever in their skit on skates, though that "Adam and Eve" number might be given a miss. Les Terrianos in striking acrobatics, and Taro Naito in rhythmical juggling complete a capital entertainment.

QUEEN'S THEATRE

A bright programme of the latest songs and dance numbers, with a liberal intermingling of comedy, is a feature of the revue, "Sometning Different," which Mr. Bourke is producing this week. The revue is divided into twelve "turn," each one of which is up to the usual high standard.

Wally Wood, comedian, who makes request entrances, kept the audience in good humour. Among the other acts were Don Philippe, with Marta and Loretta; Jan Tors, the fiddling fool; Jack Noir and Lil Ebony, two jolly coloured artists, and, of course, the Queen's Moonbeam Girls.

Alex. C. Fryer and his popular band complete a good programme.

OLYMPIA THEATRE

Described on the programme as Scotland's Greatest Juvenile Rhythm Band, the 25 Royal Kiltie Juniors, trained by Teddy Joyce, are the principal contributors to a variety entertainment this week. They gave a performance last night with enthusiasm, and won unstinted applause. Cecil Keech was surprising in his conjuring tricks and illusions, and not a little amusing in his explanations of how he did them. He was assisted by Florence Sydney. Jack Grieve was very popular as a comedian, and other artistes who strengthened the comedy parts were Daisy and Marie du Roy, Fred D'Arcy and Jack Dyson, Ernie Dillon and Bezel and Ostran. Van and Ray were interesting in their song act.

THE NORWEGIAN AVALANCHE

VILLAGES MAY BE ABANDONED

TWENTY-ONE BODIES FOUND

From Reuter's Correspondent.

OSLO, Monday.

Only 21 bodies of the 73 persons who perished in the disaster at Loen yesterday have so far been recovered. Boedal and Nesdal will possibly be entirely abandoned, for, although they possessed beautiful fruit farms, these have now been completely destroyed.

Small avalanches continued to crash down the sides of the Raven mountain to-day, and this height, as well as those around, is partially hidden by clouds caused by the grinding of the rocks.

DAZED SURVIVORS

Survivors of the tragedy are dazed with grief, for most of them have lost all their relatives.

A few have survived in remarkable fashion both the present disaster and that of 1905. All now alive who were within the area of the great wave say that after the thunderous roar of the descending avalanche their houses were overwhelmed by the water and swept hundreds of yards away.

The catastrophe has plunged the whole of Norway into mourning, and money for the relief of the survivors is pouring into funds opened by the newspapers.

THEATRE ROYAL

Two well-known radio artistes, Les Allen and Kitty Masters, have "teamed-up" to make a vaudeville act, which is presented at the top of the bill this week. Seeking novelty—the all-important feature of modern vaudeville—they have two pianos for their accompaniments (in addition to that in the orchestra). But there is more to come; the pianists give an interlude of their own with piano-accordions. It is all very pleasant, but it seems to be rather over-crowding a single act. There is no doubt that both Mr. Allen and Miss Masters have good voices, but they should be able to let their singing "stand" alone without the diversions.

It is a long time since a spring mat bouncing act has been to Dublin. Pim's Navy provides this, and the clown of the team is one of the most amusing knockabout artistes that has been here for quite a while. Norman Carroll is a good entertainer, who "breaks the rules" and proves very funny. Earle and Fortune, with Virginia Pope, have a pleasing series of dance routines, and the balance of the programme is made up with selections by Jimmy Campbell and his orchestra—introducing a new Dublin girl as a vocalist—and a series of modern waltzes played by Alban Chambers on the organ.

TORCH THEATRE

Gordon Daviot's "Queen of Scots" is continued this week at Dublin's newest repertory theatre in Capel street. The actors, who last week appeared somewhat nervous, have settled down, and the story of the life of Queen Mary from her landing at Leith to her departure from Scotland is convincingly portrayed.

Jennifer Maude, who plays the part of the Queen, gives a sympathetic and sensitive interpretation. She shows in a vivid manner all the weakness of Mary, her irresolution, and also her regal moments. Charles L. Keogh as Lethington also gives a good performance, as does Brendan O'Sullivan (Moray), Evelyn Lund (Mary Beaton), Pauline Kaye (nurse) and Joseph Slevin (Taylor). The play could, however, still be taken at a faster pace.

END OF ONE-DAY STRIKE

LANARKSHIRE PITS RE-OPEN TO-DAY

Over 20,000 miners were idle in Lanarkshire yesterday, in sympathy with the Blantyre stay-in strikers, but it was announced officially that all pits, except those of Messrs. William Dixon and Co., at Blantyre, where the stoppage occurred, would resume work to-day. There was not sufficient time to stop the one-day strike, although the men came out of the pit before midnight on Sunday, as they could not stand the conditions below.

The management of Messrs. Dixon's informed the Lanarkshire Mine Workers' Union that they would not negotiate until the men returned to their work. They added that they would not victimise the one-day strikers, but that they would not commit themselves with regard to any action concerning the fifty-four men who stayed in the pit as a protest against working conditions and rates of pay.

SHAW ON CATHOLIC ACTION

AN "IRRESPONSIBLE SOCIETY"

Mr. Bernard Shaw, in a letter to the New York Times, has protested against the demand of the American Catholic Action Societies for emendations in the film version of the play, "Saint Joan," which they threaten otherwise to place on their banned list.

"I have everything to fear from meddling busybodies who do not know that a censorship requires any qualification beyond Catholic baptism," writes Mr. Shaw.

He declares that the Catholic Action has "quite senselessly" stricken from his scenario words such as "God," "Saint Denis," "deadly sin," and "Archbishop," and even the word "babes," presumably as immodest.

"Few Americans have the least suspicion that an irresponsible Catholic Society has assumed control of their artistic recreations," he caustically adds.

TOURIST TROPHY DISASTER

SUGGESTED RELIEF FUND

At Newtownards Urban District Council last night Mr. A. Filson suggested that a public relief fund should be organised for the dependents of those who lost their lives in the recent Tourist Trophy race disaster.

Mr. W. H. Simms, J.P. (Chairman), said that the matter was one for the consideration of the Council in committee. Subsequently, following a discussion in private, it was announced in open Council that no action would be taken at present.

SOLDIER'S DEATH ON WAY TO STATION

Shortly after saying good-bye to his wife in the married quarters at Aldershot yesterday, Lance-Corporal George Ball, of the 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment, collapsed and died while marching to the military railway siding en route for Palestine.

The tragedy happened about midway between the barracks and the siding, a distance of about two miles.

Ball, who was about 46, and was one of the oldest soldiers in the battalion, with 24 years' service, was placed in a military lorry and taken to the siding, where a medical officer pronounced life extinct. He had been employed in the Quartermaster's stores.

Lieutenant-Colonel Lloyd, Australian Commercial Counsellor, has forwarded a note to the Japanese Foreign Minister, Mr. Arita, denying a newspaper report that the Australian Government has forbidden the entry of Japanese whaling depôt ships into Australian ports.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

The Cosgrave Family : Rowanberries : Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly : Dublin's Shop Fronts : Bad for Bees

The Vice-President

Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly's recent successful evasion of publicity has placed him rather prominently in the news just now. It is not commonly known that he started life as a librarian. In a recent speech before the Library Association of Ireland he recalled how he had given up his post in the National Library, much as he liked it, for the simple reason that librarians up at that time did not pay. He then turned to journalism, but found to his disgust that, if libraries were unsatisfactory from the pecuniary viewpoint, journalism was even worse! Eventually, he took to politics, which apparently proved more satisfactory. He became General Secretary of the Gaelic League in 1915, T.D. for Dublin in 1918, Speaker in the first Dáil Eireann in 1919, and finally Vice-President of the Executive Council in 1932. Despite his great political success, journalism, apparently, never lost its attractions, for he actually founded and edited the Nation in 1927. Mr. O'Kelly's linguistic achievements have, I think, won fame owing to that famous occasion at the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa of 1932 when he addressed his audience in Irish, French and English.

The Cosgraves

I met Mrs. Cosgrave on Saturday morning in her charming pleasant mood as usual. She has just got back to Beechpark after a wonderful holiday at Carna. Of course, she and Mr. Cosgrave always spend the summer at Carna, and one of their reasons for so doing is that their two sons can speak Irish with the natives. Carna is a wonderful fishing headquarters, too; for it is right in the midst of some of the finest fisheries in Europe. Mrs. Cosgrave tells me the two boys have now gone back to Castleknock, where the new term began a week ago, I think. Liam and Michael Cosgrave must now be almost grown up, as well as being fluent Irish speakers. They are going to be good farmers, too, and while at Castleknock they never lost contact with the cattle on the land at Beechpark, or their horses either.

Dublin's Shop Fronts

Infrequent visitors to Dublin (writes a correspondent) cannot fail to observe the remarkable change which is taking place in the city's shop fronts. In the past few years dull and uninteresting windows and façades have been completely transformed and brought up to date by replacing stone and brick fronts by marble and steel work by stainless chromium. Some people may regard these replacements as somewhat gaudy, but, on the whole, I think they have brightened up the city very considerably and have made for better shopping. An unattractive shop front cannot be expected to attract the passer-by, and is not in these days a good business proposition in any main thoroughfare. I am afraid, however, that a modern front with marble and chromium would not be an advisable innovation so far as the antique shops on the quays are concerned; for "modernism" and "antiquity" do not make good friends.

Bad for Bees

I hear great complaints about the adverse effect which this wet summer has had on bees. These industrious creatures suffer very greatly when such bad weather as has been the rule this year has to be endured. Bees need heat and warmth and sunshine if they are to live, and swarm, and produce good honey. But the wet weather must have taken a severe toll from the hives this year. In many parts of the country bees have had to be fed with an unusual supply of sugar and water this year in order to keep them from starvation in districts where there is no heather. In wet weather, too, the Queens die—another calamity in the hives. Bees are really sacred, and have long been respected in the Church, for do they not provide the wax candles of the ritual—but I am chiefly concerned with the honey problem.

Aileen O'Brien

I see it mentioned in some of the papers that this clever young lady, who has so recently leapt into prominence on account of her associations with the Irish Christian Front movement, was educated in California. This statement cannot be accurate, as I understand that she herself, with her brother and two sisters, spent all their extreme youth in Chili. This, of course, explains her thorough knowledge of the Spanish tongue. After leaving Chili she travelled to Switzerland and took out a degree in Fribourg University. The five or six years she spent here account for her mastery of German and French. It was in Switzerland also that Miss O'Brien became interested in the work of the Pro Deo Society, which has its headquarters in Geneva. Pro Deo is a non-sectarian society, which has as its principal aim the combating of Bolshevism. Thus it is that she is taking such a prominent part in the present movement. Only a few months ago she was invited, with other members of Pro Deo, to pay a visit to Germany to study how Christianity was faring there. The visitors were apparently very much impressed by what they were shown by their efficient German guides. At all events, Miss O'Brien wrote a very favourable account of the Nazi régime in an Irish Catholic periodical on her return. The O'Briens have now been living in Ireland for a little over a year, and their present residence is in Enfield, Co. Meath.

Fruit Harvest

Despite a very unpleasant summer, the fruit harvest does not seem to be particularly affected. Apples seem to be a good crop in some places, but the man who tells you how numerous are his apples often adds that many of his plum trees have not borne any fruit at all. A Belfast man complained to me a week ago about the abnormally high cost of living in Dublin compared to that of the Northern capital. He singled out Victoria plums as an item costing about 1s. 3d. a pound in Dublin, as against just a bare 3d. in Belfast. Since then, however, I have noticed that the price of Victoria plums has come down to 8d. in Dublin. But one always hears the Belfast man trying to boost his town, and invariably he insists that the Antrim coast road presents a finer sight than Killarney.

Rowanberries

At present the mountain ash is adding its glowing contribution to the landscape; but, while the London Metropolitan Public Gardens Association have recommended this decorative tree for town-planning, it is not often seen in Dublin parks. In the country there still lingers a belief in its powers of magic, which, perhaps, accounts for the lack of interest taken in its fruit; for rowanberries are generally left to the blackbirds. Lately people, struck with their decorative value, have been filling their large flower vases with branches of mountain ash in its orange-herried splendour. For centuries the rowanberry, or mountain ash, has been regarded with superstition. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the word runa, which is derived from Sanscrit, was the term applied to a magician. In due time runa became rowanberry. In Scotland and Northern Ireland rowanberries were used as a charm. Those people who believed that when their churnings went wrong, and failed to yield up the necessary butter, that the witches were at work, were wont to rely upon a piece of mountain ash in the dairy. This they believed capable of counteracting the influence of the evil spirit. But, if the rowanberry is not appreciated in Ireland from the culinary angle, it is converted into wine in Wales, while in the North of England the berries are pickled. They turn out to be very good pickles, too. Rowanberry jelly is really one of the commodities which should be found in every good pantry. It is not difficult to make, and is excellent with either cold game or meat.

FILM NOTES

The Films of Yesteryear

"Movie Parade" : The Irish Film Society : Mr. Aherne from Belfast : Edward Everett Horton

By Our Cinema Correspondent.

I HAVE just been looking at a very attractive book, which is written and edited by Mr. Paul Rotha, and published by The Studio, Ltd., at 10s. 6d. It is called "Movie Parade," and what it amounts to is a record of the film from its earliest days up to the present year. Thus far I have had to deny myself the pleasure of reading Mr. Rotha's letterpress, having been occupied in looking at the illustrations, of which there are enough to keep any reader occupied for a long time. Later I hope to review this delightful book, which brings back innumerable memories of innumerable films, some of which have long since been forgotten, while others live still, and will continue to live, in the recollection of anyone who has seen them.

For the moment I would just call attention to a few things which have surprised me. On the title-page, for instance, is a "still," depicting Greta Garbo playing in a film that was screened in 1923—thirteen years ago. Who could have believed it? Or who remembers that Clara Kimball Young was acting so long as 1913 (in "Goodness Gracious," an American comedy)? Or that Polly Moran, whom we associate nowadays with the late Marie Dressler, was acting ingénue parts in 1915 or thereabouts? On the same page with these two is a scene from "Tillie's Punctured Romance" (dated 1914), which depicts the said Marie Dressler storming furiously around the room, while Charlie Chaplin cowers behind a curtain at the end. Charlie Murray is another of those old stagers; he is shown here in a Mack Sennett picture of 1917. And, to skip a few years, how many people remember that Walter Huston began his career as a desperado in Wild West films ("The Virginian," 1929), or that Gary Cooper, the idol of to-day, actually has been "starred" for five years? Indeed, I am surprised to see how many actors who seem to have impinged upon my perceptions only within the last two or three years actually have been filling the box-offices for twice or three times as long.

Congratulations

BUT of "Movie Parade" more anon. One feature of it which has saddened me is the number of great films illustrated therein that never have been seen in this country. It is pleasant then to notice that yet another effort is being made by a group of enthusiasts to bring them here. A new body, the Irish Film Society, has taken over the activities of the Dublin Little Theatre Guild, which has shown several of the greatest of all films—films that the ordinary cinemas would not venture to show for fear of losing money—in this city of late. The new society, as it appears, promises to be even more energetic, and I hope most sincerely that it will gain every support. As well as bringing over important continental films, it proposes to "organise the public by making available information on the cinema and introducing the best type of film into Ireland." And (I quote from its prospectus):

> "It will work for the improvement of general standards of film entertainment, and hopes to see founded specialist and repertory cinemas, special showings for children, and the linking up of the cinema with the educational programme of the country. Whenever possible, it will encourage native film production along the paths which will make it of some value in the achievements of cinema."

The annual subscription is 5s., and the Hon. Treasurer can be reached at 41 South Circular road (Portobello), Dublin.

I know naught of the organisation of film societies, of the difficulty of obtaining these classic films, or of the price that is charged. Yet there ought to be no reason why this latest venture should not succeed. And, Heaven knows, the Free State is badly behind other countries in matters of this kind. I am not one of those people who hold that every "commercial"—for that matter, every American—film is automatically bad and every continental film a work of genius; but I do know that, until we see a great deal more of the work of certain continental producers, we have no right to open our mouths on the subject of the art. For my part, I hope that the Irish Film Society will obtain a really large membership; for the more members there are, the more films there will be.

Sweetness and Light

SINCE it is never fine but it is very fine, and never rains but it pours, nearly all of this week's films are light. "I Live My Life," at the Capitol, will make you laugh, as the Greeks said not once or twice, but many times. It has Joan Crawford in it as a spoiled beauty, and Brian Aherne, speaking flawless Hollywood English, as an archæologist—from Belfast, of all places. There is, by the way, a very good "short" of life on Pitcairn Island. "Public Nuisance No. 1," at the Grafton, is one of the very few English farces outside the work of Tom Walls and Ralph Lynn—that have made me laugh. Arthur Riscoe is admirable in it, and Frances Day is rapidly becoming a comedienne of the first order. "Page Miss Glory," at the Savoy, begins with an excellent idea—concerning two down-on-their-lucks who enter a composite photograph for a beauty competition—but the difficulties of the resulting situation are too long drawn-out, and Marion Davies is not up to her usual level.

Edward Everett Horton appears in a somewhat conventional racketeer picture, entitled "Nobody's Fool," at the Royal. We have seen these films before, concerning the "sucker" who comes up from the country, falls among thieves, and eventually proves himself more than their match. In this case Edward Everett Horton is the "sucker," a fact which helps to counterbalance the unoriginality of the theme. But I still feel that we are seeing too much of him.

There is one "leg-show," being "King of Burlesque," at the Stephen's Green; and, as leg-shows go, it is an unusually good one, being spectacular beyond the normal. Warner Baxter plays an unaccustomed type of part, and plays it well; but the honours, in my view, go to Jack Oakie as the impresario's right-hand man.

WARNER BAXTER appears again in a quite powerful film, inclining to melodrama, at the Metropole. This is "The Robin Hood of El Dorado," and its scene is in California, a century ago—more frequently used as setting for song-singing trash than for a reasonably serious picture. I must confess that I enjoyed it very thoroughly. On the other hand, "The Lone Wolf Returns," at the Corinthian, gave me no great pleasure. The debonair crook, played, in this case, by Melvyn Douglas, has rather outlived his usefulness. It was worth sitting through, however, for the sake of the supporting feature, "Escape from Devil's Island," which is good, honest blood-and-thunder that will not please the French, if they pay any attention to it.

Still Showing

"Invitation to the Waltz"—Is rather more carefully constructed than most of these costume pieces, though the ending is farcical. At the Pavilion, Dun Laoghaire, until to-morrow night.

"The Man with Two Faces"—Good, by virtue of Edward G. Robinson. At the Sackville from To-morrow.

The Bray Coons, presented by Mike Nono, will broadcast (at 8.35) a portion of their farewell variety performance.

Moiseiwitsch, the celebrated pianist, is again playing for Sir Henry Wood at the Promenade Concert. To-night, in an all Tchaikovsky programme, he will play the solo part in the Pianoforte Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor. The Overture Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet," opens the concert, and the two works constitute this evening's relay.

"Play with Music" is a specially arranged broadcast for Midland listeners at 6 of artistes appearing in Birmingham this week in a new musical production. The play is by Guy Newall, lyrics and music by B. C. Hilliam, orchestrated by Fred Hartley, devised and presented by Paul England, who, we are glad to see, is also taking part. His fine singing is well known to listeners.

"The Black Eye" is a Glasgow comedy by James Bridie, a Glasgow author, which had a great success in London as a stage play. It has been adapted for broadcasting and will be performed in a Glasgow studio, though it will come to listeners in the National programme to-night and in the main Regional to-morrow night.

To-day's special relay will come from South Africa, when the opening ceremony of the Empire Exhibition at Johannesburg will be broadcast. The exhibition, which celebrates fifty years of Johannesburg's existence, and is claimed to be the biggest since Wembley, will be opened by Lord Clarendon, the Governor-General of South Africa. Other speakers include General the Hon. J. B. M. Hertzog, Prime Minister, and the Hon. G. M. Huggins, Prime Minister of Southern Rhodesia. Greetings from Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of Great Britain, and from the Premiers of Canada, Australia and New Zealand, which have been recorded in their own countries, will also be heard.

To-night's broadcast on the meeting of the British Association at Blackpool will include a report by H. J. T. Ellingham and some impressions of Professor J. C. Philip's address on "The Chemist and the Community," and of the discussions which followed (North Regional, 7.40).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE "WHITE LINE"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I would like to take the opportunity of endorsing the opinions expressed in your issue of Friday last by Mr. T. C. Goff in his letter on the subject of the white line on our highways. The value of the white line in promoting safety on the road does not appear to be sufficiently realised by the road authorities in this country.

When the idea of delimiting the path available for opposing streams of traffic, by means of a white line along the centre of the roadway, was first put into practice, now many years ago, it became the subject of much controversy and argument. But to-day the general opinion in all civilised countries is strongly in favour of the white line, which year by year is coming into greater use. The white line had, in fact, proved in very extensive practice to be a most valuable safety-promoting device when applied with intelligence.

Yet in the Irish Free State the white line is employed sparingly and tentatively in certain country and urban areas, and in other districts it is not found at all. Few of our road authorities appear to be enthusiastic concerning its value, while quite a number of others are either definitely opposed to its use or have not yet considered its potentialities.

Surely this is a matter in which the central road authorities of this country might be permitted to issue—after careful investigation and consideration of the whole problem—some words of advice to the local bodies whose business it is to repair and maintain the roads in their districts. Advice on a matter so closely affecting the welfare and safety of all road users could hardly be interpreted as interference with the independence and authority of our many local road authorities. And for the same reason the question of cost is quite immaterial.

Either the white line is a useful safety device or it is not. If the latter is the case the leading road authorities of the United States of America and Great Britain are wrong. If the former is the correct view, why has the white line not already been adopted to promote safety on all our principal highways?

Your correspondent, Mr. T. C. Goff, referred in his letter to the Dublin-Bray road. It would be difficult to imagine any stretch of important highway on which the white line might be more usefully employed, yet no trace of it is seen until the confines of Little Bray are reached.

If foreign experience of the white line is not sufficiently convincing to our road authorities, surely the Dublin-Bray road offers absolutely ideal conditions for conducting valuable experimental investigations, the results of which might be applied throughout the country.—Yours, etc.,

E. J. McCREDY, Secretary.

SCHOOL MEALS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In a recent issue of your paper you published an extract from the report of the City School Medical Service, part of which runs as follows:—

"Medical officers had reported that 15 city schools were unsuitable (requiring demolition and rebuilding), 41 were overcrowded, 67 had one or more rooms inadequately lighted, and 56 had inadequate sanitary or washing facilities. Inadequate playground space was found in 50 school premises."

As it must take some time to rectify these appalling conditions, is it too much to hope that the suggestion to increase the present midday meal interval in those schools will now be acted upon? This increased time for lunch would ensure that the unfortunate little ones, compelled by law to attend those unsuitable schools, would at least get a breath of fresh air and a better chance of enjoying their lunch. Many would, undoubtedly, go home for a meal, thus relieving the congestion in the playgrounds.

Two years ago the Irish Save the Children Fund appealed to the authorities to increase the midday meal interval in all the city National schools from the present half-hour to 1½ hours to enable the children to go home for a midday dinner. The matter was again raised by Dr. Russell, Chief M.O.H., in a letter to the City Manager, dated 24th October, 1935, in which he recommends that the said interval be increased to at least one hour. Dr. Russell's recommendation was unanimously agreed to at a meeting of the City Council on the 6th April, 1936.

When our medical officers and City Fathers are thus agreed that such a change would prove beneficial to thousands of city children why is the change not given a fair trial?—Yours, etc.,

K. MONAHAN, Secretary.

RUGBY FOOTBALL

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As the Rugby football season is now opening I would like to suggest that captains of clubs pay more attention than heretofore to the training of their teams in the place-kicking of goals. How many points are lost in almost all the matches for the want of reliable goal kicking?

Our International teams are selected from the best "stuff" we can produce, who have shown the best form during the season in their respective positions—still the "conversion" of a try, or a penalty, is only too often a "doubtful starter." One day last week I happened to pass by the sports ground of a well-known Dublin school, and was delighted to see a number of the boys out, evidently being coached in the art (for it is an art) of goal kicking from every angle. "Full marks," says I.—Yours, etc.,

"RUGBY ENTHUSIAST."

A WHITE SWALLOW

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Referring to the letter of Mr. Brandon, Abbeyleix, appearing in your issue of 8th inst. regarding a white swallow seen by him, I wish to inform you white swallows are not so rare as people suppose.

On 30th June, 1924, I found five young swallows kept in a cage in a byre by a young man near Clones. Four of the birds were of the ordinary colour. The other was of a greyish white colour. All the birds belonged to the same nest and were being fed by the parent birds. The lad refused to liberate the youngsters. He had, no doubt, a hope of selling the white one. I compelled him to liberate them at once, otherwise I would have had a summons issued and served immediately. I never saw or heard of the bird since. No doubt it was killed by some other vandal.—Yours, etc.,

MILLIONS FOR HOUSING

MANY DUBLIN SCHEMES

LORD MAYOR URGES GREATER SPEED

THE necessity for speeding up the Corporation was urged in a letter from the Lord Mayor (Alderman A. Byrne, T.D.) to the City Manager, which was submitted at yesterday's meeting of the Dublin Corporation Housing Committee.

"There are," wrote the Lord Mayor, "a large number of workers in the building trade unemployed, and you have recently purchased sites for from 13,000 to 14,000 dwellings. I shall be glad, therefore, to know what is the cause of the delay. There is a terrible demand in the city for housing and there is a large number of areas in the city that should be tackled."

The letter then mentioned a number of areas which the Lord Mayor considers should be taken over by the Corporation.

Mr. J. Sherwin, for the City Manager, in the course of a reply stated that five private firms of quantity surveyors (in addition to the Corporation staff) are engaged on schemes in hands.

North Cumberland street, he states, already has been included in the North City housing area, and will be dealt with as alternative accommodation is made available in the area. The first section of the Railway street area is now in the hands of the contractor. Poplar row scheme will be ready for building tenders by to-day. The South Lotts road scheme is in the hands of the contractors, while the Townsend street and Henrietta street schemes will be put up for tender within the next two months.

The compulsory purchase order for the Crumlin extension has been arranged for, and it is expected that possession will be obtained during the next few months.

ALDBOROUGH HOUSE

Contract drawings, building quantities, etc., are available for invitation of tenders in the case of the Aldborough House site as soon as the Corporation obtain possession, but the Department of Posts and Telegraphs has not yet indicated its decision in the matter.

Grant's row and North Clarence street are included in the list of provisionally selected sites. These will provide space for about 11,000 houses.

Summing up the activities of the Corporation Housing Department, Mr. Sherwin points out that the number of houses erected in 1935 was 2,320 at an estimated cost of £1,131,724.

In 1936 the number of houses in the hands of contractors is given as 1,677, while the number to be let out to contract is 651, or a total for this year of 2,328, at an estimated cost of £1,135,410.

In 1937 the number of houses to be erected in areas in respect of which acquisition procedure is well advanced will be 2,115, costing £991,000. This makes a total of 6,763 houses erected at a cost of £3,308,134 during a period of three years.

In view of the commitments of the Corporation Housing Department, it is understood that no action was taken on the Lord Mayor's letter. It was, however, decided to visit some of the housing schemes and sites mentioned by Mr. Sherwin.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NAVAN, Monday.

An inquest was opened and adjourned at the County Hospital, Navan, this evening concerning the death of Philip Clarke, Kilberry, Navan, aged 35. The deceased man, is was stated, was cycling to Navan on Saturday night, and collided with another bicycle ridden by Miss J. Carroll, Leggah, who was returning from Navan. Clarke in his fall sustained injuries necessitating his removal to the County Hospital, where he died yesterday evening without regaining consciousness.

Miss Carroll escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Mary Clarke, mother of the deceased man, said that her son was in the best of health on Saturday. After his dinner he went to Proudstown races, after which he returned for his tea, and at about 7 o'clock he went to Navan on his bicycle, and that was the last she saw of him. His sight was good, and he had a lamp in good working order. He showed no signs of drink after his return from the races.

John Murray stated that he was walking into Navan at about 8.30 p.m., and Clarke passed him cycling on the centre of the road. He then heard a crash, and saw the shadow of a man falling on to the road sixty or eighty yards away. As the man did not rise witness ran up to where he lay. A girl standing on the road said that the man ran straight into her. With assistance they removed the man on to the foothpath, and later to the hospital.

She was travelling home from Southampton with her daughter when their car was involved in a collision with another car. The other car, in which a Mr. Buxton, of Norwich, was travelling, overturned, but Mr. Buxton was not hurt.

Mrs. Alexander was able to go home after treatment at Basingstoke Hospital.

Earlier in the day Mr. and Mrs. Alexander had landed at Southampton from the Queen Mary, and Mr. Alexander travelled home by train.

Mr. Alexander was First Lord of the Admiralty in the Labour Government of 1929-31.

Michael Bridgeman, of Brian road, Marine, Dublin, had three fingers of one hand amputated when he caught them in the spindle of a machine in a building contractor's premises in Thomas street, Dublin, yesterday. He was removed to Steevens's Hospital for treatment.

STOMACH PAINS GONE IN 5 MINUTES

The first thing you want when you suffer from stomach pain is quick relief. Then, when the pain has gone, you want to keep it away. That is just how Mrs. Davies, of Brighton, felt. She suffered agony with her stomach. Now she has found the way to banish stomach pain quickly and for good.

"Two weeks ago," her husband writes, "a great friend brought my wife a 1/6 bottle of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. It was on Saturday morning, just before dinner, and my wife was then in great pain. "She immediately took a dose and within five minutes the pain was gone. It was quite nice to see her without the look of pain on her face. She is taking it regularly now and I am pleased to say she is more like her old self.

"I shall always say to my friends, 'Don't suffer, buy a bottle of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, but be sure it is Alex. C. Maclean's.'"

This is only one example of the miraculous ending of pain experienced after taking Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. Thousands of stomach sufferers will tell you the same glad tidings. But be careful. Steer clear of unproven 'remedies.' Look for the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on your bottle—the sign of the original MACLEAN BRAND Stomach Powder—your assurance of quick, lasting relief from stomach pain. 1/6, 2/3 and 5/3, powder or tablets. Never sold loose.

UNUSUAL LABOUR CRUX

SEQUEL TO UNION'S BID TO GET IN ARREARS

FROM OUR INDUSTRIAL CORRESPONDENT.

An unusual position has arisen as a result of an effort on the part of the Irish Seamen's and Port Workers' Union to collect arrears of subscriptions from some of their members.

The union notified the interested parties in a Dublin cartage establishment that from yesterday onwards men who had not "cleared their cards" would not be permitted to obtain delivery of goods from members of the union employed at the port.

When the staff presented themselves for work yesterday morning they found that the firm had given instructions that members of the Irish Seamen's and Port Workers' Union were not to start work. In their report to the union on the matter the workers concerned (about thirty) stated that no ban had been placed upon the members of other unions.

When approached regarding the matter yesterday, a representative of the firm said that he would make a statement on the matter in a day or two.

A representative of the union said that no explanation had been given to the union by the firm for the action taken. He added that the union had no dispute with the employer, and were merely taking the usual action against individual members.

TRAMWAY WORKERS

New duty schedules on about seven different routes were introduced by the Dublin United Tramways Company yesterday in an effort to improve working conditions for the men.

Reports from the various routes upon which the new schedules have been in operation during the past few weeks would seem to indicate that in the main the new spread-overs are satisfactory.

Difficulty has been found in satisfying the needs of all tram-drivers and conductors, as some men prefer the short rest period, which is one of the features of the new experiment, while others prefer a lengthy dinner hour, during which they can return to their homes.

HOUSING IN COUNTY LEITRIM

REPORT TO THE BOARD OF HEALTH

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

CARRICK-ON-SHANNON, Monday.

Mr. Michael McGrath, Chairman, presided at a meeting of the Leitrim Board of Health, which was held to-day.

The Secretary (Mr. L. Keaveny) reported that only one tender had been received for the erection of 82 houses at Carrick-on-Shannon. The advertisement asked for alternative tenders—either for erection in stone or concrete.

The tender, Mr. Keaveny stated, was over the maximum allowed for the building of each house in stone or cement. The amount allowed to cover the all-in cost was £300, and the tender ran into £350 or £375 per house.

Several members were in favour of re-advertising for tenders for erection of houses in concrete only. Mr. Gildea strongly opposed this and suggested re-advertising for alternative tenders in stone or concrete, saying that there were a number of quarries all over the country. They should do their best for local labour and not be sending most of the money to the foreigners.

It was stated that if advertised for in concrete alone several well-known firms throughout the Free State would tender, and finally the Chairman (Mr. McGrath) proposed, and Mr. Travers seconded, that fresh advertisements be issued for the erection of houses in concrete. This was agreed to.

The architects (Messrs. McDonald and Dixon) submitted a report dealing with housing in the towns of Leitrim. They stated that 36 were about to be erected at Mohill; 82 at Carrick, when tenders were accepted; and the following were their suggestion as to housing at the other towns—Manorhamilton, 40; Ballinamore, 30; Carrigallen, 20; Drumshanbo, 20; Kiltyclogher, 12; Kinlough, 10; Drumkeeran, 8 or 10; and in the case of Dromahaire, suitable sites to be selected and a water supply provided before the scheme was begun.

The architects supplied plans in each instance, and these were referred to the local committees to go into, and make recommendations as to the acquisition of sites and purchase. Ratification has to be received from the Department before the sites can be acquired in areas where not already dealt with.

IRISH WEDDINGS

MR. NIGEL FITZROY AND MISS D. PERY-KNOX-GORE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Monday.

Queen Mary gave a silver cigarette box to Mr. Nigel H. T. Fitzroy, only son of the late Sir Almeric Fitzroy, K.C.B., K.C.V.O., and Lady Fitzroy, whose wedding to Miss Diana Frances Pery-Knox-Gore took place in London this afternoon.

The bride is the elder daughter of Brigadier A. F. G Pery-Knox-Gore, D.S.O., Brigadier in Charge of Administration, Northern Command, York, and Mrs. Pery-Knox-Gore, of Escrick Park, York. The bride's father is the son of the late E. H. Pery-Knox-Gore, of Collcronan, Ballina, County Mayo. The bridegroom is estate agent for the Earl of Harewood, and as a wedding gift from the Earl and the Princess Royal he received a Britannic mark silver salver.

The ceremony took place at St. Ethelburga's, Bishopsgate, E.C. Only a few of the many friends of the bride and bridegroom could be seated in this small building, and of those present many stood during the ceremony. The Rev. W. F. Geikie-Cobb, rector, officiated amid a setting of white gladioli.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a wedding gown of lustrous white satin, bands of the reverse side of the material trimming the train, which was an extension of the long skirt itself. The simple bodice had a square neck-line and sleeves, deeply pleated at the shoulder and tapering to the wrist. A semi-circlet of gardenias secured her long veil of misty white tulle. She carried a bouquet of pale pink carnations.

There were four bridesmaids—Miss Mary Pery-Knox-Gore, Miss Elfizabeth Cokayne, Miss Katherine Moore and Miss Elizabeth Leyborne-Popham. They wore picture gowns of shot blue silk taffeta, with full long skirts, over which fell "waterfall" sashes of the material, lined with pale pink taffetas. The wide "slashed" sleeves of the bodices also revealed similar pink linings. They wore wreaths of pink flowers and blue-green leaves, and, instead of flowers, held vanity cases of blue enamel, with their initials in gold, which were gifts from the bridegroom.

Mr. William E. Yates was best man.

Mrs. Pery-Knox-Gore held a reception at 9 Grosvenor Crescent, after which the bride and bridegroom left for Somerset.

Among others at the ceremony were:—Miss Yvonne Fitzroy, Master Edmund Pery-Knox-Gore, Mrs. Pery-Knox-Gore, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Pery-Knox-Gore, Miss Pery-Knox-Gore, Colonel and Mrs. Saunders-Knox-Gore, Miss Zasa Saunders-Knox-Gore, the Hon. Lady Anstruther Gough-Calthorpe, Miss Saunders-Knox-Gore, Mrs. Leyborne-Popham, Lady Cromwell, Countess Howe, the Hon. Stephen De-Yarburgh-Bateson, Lady Peramore, Lady and Miss Philipson-Stow, Lady Helen Best, Lady Edwina Lewein, Brigadier General Henry Lewin, General Sir Henry and Lady Croker, the Dowager Viscountess Colville, Dame Louise McIlroy, Mr. H. R. Brand, the Countess of Malmesbury.

On their return from Somerset Mr. and Mrs. Nigel Fitzroy will live at Harewood House, Leeds.

LIEUTENANT J. F. W. HINE AND MISS M. MELDON

The wedding took place at St. Augustine's Church, Tunbridge Wells, yesterday, of Lieutenant John Franklyn William Hine, R.N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Hine, of New Milton, Hampshire, and Miss Moira Meldon, third daughter of Mr. John M. Meldon, LL.B., and Mrs. Meldon, of Molyneux Park, Tunbridge Wells, late of Galway, and St Raphael, France.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of ivory satin, closely moulded to the figure. The neckline was high, with soft folds of satin forming a collar, and the waist line defined only by swathed folds of the satin. The sash was tied in a loose knot in front and a long full train fell from the waist, being cut in one with the skirt. The bride's veil was of white tulle, surmounted by a coronet of white mother of pearl, and she carried a bouquet of white Madonna lilies and pink carnations.

The Misses Sheila and Pat Meldon, and Miss Joan Hine, who acted as bridesmaids, wore turquoise blue taffeta and tulle dresses, with short puffed sleeves; large sashes with bows of taffeta, and toques of brown net and plaited bands of turquoise blue.

At the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Charles Jones, C.C., Lieutenant Bagshaw, R.N., acted as best man, and a guard of honour composed of officers of the 4th Destroyer Flotilla, under the command of Lieutenant-Commander Alkin, R.N., was in attendance.

Members of the crew of H.M.S. Brilliant mustered at the church door and hauled the bridal equipage to the Spa Hotel, Tunbridge Wells, where a reception was held.

The honeymoon is being spent in England, and later in the West of Ireland, on the sporting preserves of the bride's father. The bride's father is the well-known game shot and veteran cricketer who captained Irish international cricket sides in the late 'nineties, and twice captured the Irish amateur billiards championship.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

VISITATION OF CIRCUITS

The Conference which met in Belfast in June last adopted a scheme for the visitation of circuits, and directed that it be put into force by the September Synods. At the Synods the matter was taken up with great heartiness. Belfast Synod arranged for the visitation of no fewer than fourteen circuits during this connexional year, and all the other Synods for three or four such visitations. The Commission in each case is to consist of two ministers and two laymen; a minister and layman appointed by the Synod concerned, and a minister and layman appointed by the Standing Committee of the Church. The scheme will be for ever associated with the name of the late Rev. William Corrigan, who was for years its most vigorous advocate.

At the request of the Enniskillen and Clones District Synod, the recent conference appointed a Commission to meet with that Synod and consider some readjustment of the circuit boundaries and work within that district. The members of the Commission were present at the meeting of the Synod in Lisnaskea on the 10th inst., the whole of the afternoon session being given up to consultation on this important matter. A committee was appointed to look into certain matters and report to the Synod and the Commission. Both the members of the Synod and of the Commission, nearly one hundred in all, were kindly entertained to lunch and tea by the ladies of the Lisnaskea congregation.

Newtownards Road Church, Belfast, which is the church with the largest seating capacity in Irish Methodism, was re-opened on Sunday after very extensive renovation and repair. The President of the Methodist Church in Ireland, the Rev. W. H. Massey, conducted the Morning and Evening Services, and the Rev. J. W. P. Elliott a special Young People's Service in the afternoon. There were generous offerings in aid of the renovation fund.

At a public meeting held in the new People's Hall, Londonderry, which has recently been erected by the Derry City Mission of the Methodist Church at a cost of over £7,000, a handsome tablet to the memory of the late Mr. Thomas Gordon was unveiled by Lady Anderson, C.B.E. The President, the Rev. W. H. Massey, delivered a suitable address. The Rev. Robert Byers, who, for health reasons, retired from the superintendency of the mission at the recent conference, told of the romantic beginning of the work in that district of the city, and how Mr. Gordon presented a house for the carrying on of Services.

At a meeting held a few days previously of the Londonderry (Carlisle Road) Women's Department a beautiful gold wristlet watch was presented to Mrs. C. W. Gordon. The presentation on behalf of the members was made by Lady Anderson, C.B.E., who spoke of Mrs. Gordon's devoted work for many years as secretary of the Women's Department. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon are leaving immediately for a long visit to their three sons, their two daughters-in-law, and four grandchildren in New Zealand, and intend visiting Egypt and the Holy Land on their return. Mr. Gordon is the eldest son of Mr. Thomas Gordon, to whom the tablet in the new People's Hall has been erected.

Donegal Methodist Church was crowded on the evening of the 11th inst., when a valedictory Service for the Rev. Mortimer Temple, M.A., who is proceeding to an important appointment in one of the missionary colleges in India, was held. The Service was conducted by the President, the Rev. W. H. Massey, the officers of the Irish Auxiliary to the Missionary Society, the Rev. G. A. Joynt, M.A., treasurer, and the Rev. Wesley G. Lee, secretary, also taking part. Mr. Temple's family has long been prominently identified with Methodism in Donegal.

A preliminary meeting of the Dublin Methodist Council has been summoned for Thursday of this week to make arrangements for the work of the session and to co-opt the additional members required to complete the Council. The Rev. Johnstone Hunter and Dr. H. G. Smith are the honorary secretaries of the Council.

Through the kindness of generous friends a "Little Chapel" is being provided in connection with George's Hall, South Great George's street, Dublin. It will be used solely for devotional purposes, and will be open all day and every day for any who care to use it for meditation and private prayer. The dedication Service of the "Little Chapel" has been fixed for Saturday afternoon, 10th October. The Service will be conducted by the President of the Methodist Church in Ireland, who will be assisted by the Superintendent of the Mission, the Rev. J. Wesley McKinney, and the Rev. James M. Alley. On the following afternoon the opening Services will be continued, when the preacher will be the Rev. R. Lee Cole, M.A., B.D.

FILM PRODUCER'S DEATH

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SANTA MONICA, CALIFORNIA, Monday.

Mr. Irving Thalberg, well-known film producer, and husband of Norma Shearer, the actress, died suddenly here to-day. Norma Shearer was at his bedside. Mr. Thalberg was Vice-President in charge of production of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Mutiny on the Bounty" being two of his recent productions. DEATH FROM POISONING

INQUEST ON STUDENT

Medical evidence to the effect that death was due to a narcotic poison, the exact nature of which was not known, was given at the inquest in the Adelaide Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, on the body of Hugh Bedford (23), a medical student in Guy's Hospital, London.

Bedford, who had been holidaying in Kells, Co. Meath, was admitted to the hospital on Saturday, and died shortly afterwards.

The inquest was adjourned, on the application of Sergeant Finnegan, Civic Guards, to enable the State analyst to carry out an examination.

Mr. A. Cox represented the next-of-kin.

James Bedford, father of the deceased man, Bexsborough, Roehampton, stated that his son was staying at Mrs. Wilson's, Kells, Co. Meath. He was in good health, but had been working very hard for his final medical examination, and used to remain up studying until 3 a.m. or 4 a.m. When a small boy, before going to England, he suffered from sunstroke, which caused a temporary squint in his eyes, and, consequently, he had worn glasses to correct it. He could not say, beyond what he had heard, that his son was experimenting with drugs.

Dr. Cartan, house surgeon, said that the deceased man was in a deep state of coma when admitted. He was stated to have taken six New Butol tablets and other drugs the nature of which was unknown.

2 ARE BETTER THAN 1

2 OILS ARE BETTER THAN 1

No other oil can give such sure protection, such infallible lubrication as Motorine★ two oils in one—a blend of mineral and fatty oil. When you start up from cold, the fatty oil protects the cylinder walls against wear due to rust and corrosion. When you soar along at speed, again the fatty oil ensures that the oil film does not break down no matter how high the engine temperature or how heavy the load. Ordinary oils do not give this protection from wear or high engine speed with safety. It is real economy to put Motorine—two oils in one—into your engine. It costs no more. It lasts longer. It gives you perfect lubrication. Change over to-day.

Blut und Eisen

This year's congress of the German National Socialist Party at Nuremberg has been something in the nature of an anti-climax. Everybody expected Herr Hitler to make some dramatic pronouncement. Many thought that he would break off diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia, and not a few predicted that he actually would send his troops through Poland into the Ukraine. In the event he did nothing. In his final speech yesterday Herr Hitler boasted that the National Socialist Party did not talk—it acted; but rarely in Europe's history has there been such a spate of talk as that which has been gushing from the party platforms during the last week or so at Nuremberg. Somebody once said during the Irish civil war that Mr. de Valera was marching on Dublin at the head of 20,000 words. Similarly it might be said that Herr Hitler is marching on Moscow at the head of a couple of million words; for he and his lieutenants have devoted much of their time and energies since the congress began to virulent attacks on Soviet Russia, with the inevitable corollary of repeated onslaughts on the unfortunate Jews. We have little sympathy with the Soviets or their ways; but the fact is that Russia to-day is a world Power, with a Government that has been recognised by virtually every civilised State in the world, including Germany. Never in peace-time has the head of one State delivered such unbridled attacks on another as those which Herr Hitler has been making at Nuremberg, and the only explanation of his conduct is that he is trying to stir up the passion of the German people against the Russians. It must be remembered that Russia has an alliance with France. Herr Hitler's remarks about Moscow, therefore, will be interpreted in Paris as a covert attack on France, and the cause of peace will be badly served. Furthermore, the Chancellor and his adjutants have not troubled to conceal their continued hatred and persecution of the Jews, which in its way is just as savage as the persecution of the Church in Spain. The Nazis are determined that the popular bitterness against the Jews shall not be allowed to abate, and all the patriotic speeches at Nuremberg were directed towards that unworthy end.

One of Herr Hitler's proudest boasts at Nuremberg was the statement that ninety-nine per cent. of the German people were behind him and his party. Why, then, should he become so much excited about the dangers of Bolshevism? "We see in Bolshevism," he declared, "a bestial, mad doctrine, which is a threat to us." He added that the National Socialists regarded Bolshevism abroad as an enemy, and laid stress on the fact that Russia was pushing her military forces ever closer to the German frontiers. "We shall fight Bolshevism as a world Power," he said, "if it tries to transfer its Spanish methods to Germany." Surely there is something suspiciously inconsistent here. On the assumption that ninety-nine per cent. of the German people are with the Nazis, there ought to be no question of a Bolshevist outbreak in the Third Reich. It is true that the German workers have not much money—all Germany's spare cash is going to buy armaments and munitions of war. It also is true that Herr Hitler has told them that they need not expect any increase in wages, and one of his Ministers announced recently that bullets were more important than butter. On the other hand, popular enthusiasm has been worked up to such a pitch by Dr. Goebbels's propaganda department that any dissatisfaction with the Administration ought to be unthinkable. Can it be possible that Herr Hitler is not so sure of his ground after all? There is no doubt whatever that he has done great work for the Germans. He has lifted them out of the slough of national despond into which they fell in 1918, and in which they remained throughout the period of treaty fulfilment. They are a great and powerful nation once again, fired by Herr Hitler's flaming words, and looking forward eagerly to the new heaven and the new earth which he has promised them. We have a shrewd suspicion, however, that some of them are beginning at last to have their doubts. They realise now that Germany will not be likely to secure her place in the sun without the serious risk of another World War. Having experienced the horrors of one war, they do not relish the prospect of another; and behind all the glittering façade of Nuremberg's display, behind all the blare of noisy propaganda, the trained ear can detect the still faint murmurings of stifled reason.

However much one may believe that Herr Hitler does not desire another war—and, oddly enough, we are inclined to share that belief—there is not the least doubt that his whole policy is leading to a world upheaval. Once again the German mind is proving its utter inability to understand the minds of other peoples. If Bethmann-Hollweg had had the remotest conception of the British psychology in 1914—and Prince Lichnowsky went to the greatest pains to explain it to him—there would have been no war; and, if Ludendorff had been able to grasp the attitude of the United States, President Wilson certainly never would have come in on the allied side. Now it seems that Herr Hitler is falling into the old German error. He fondly imagines that, if he builds up a sufficiently powerful fighting force, all the other States will become afraid of him, and Germany will be able to obtain everything that she needs without the firing of a single shot. The Poles will hand him over the "corridor"; the Austrians will fall over one another in their scramble to secure the Anschluss; the Czechs will relinquish their grip on North-Western Bohemia, and all the former colonies will be restored to the Fatherland without so much as a grumble. The theory might be sound enough if the Germans were the only people in the world with racial or national pride. Bismarck was able to do a certain amount of intimidation in his day; but the world has moved rather far during the last sixty years. Not only Soviet Russia, but Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Yugoslavia—to say nothing of France and Belgium—will submit to Nazi bullying just as little as they submitted to the bullying methods of the Hohenzollerns. The mad race for armaments, which is now in full career, ought to be a warning to Herr Hitler, who started it; but his Nuremberg performances suggest that he is entirely oblivious of foreign activities. He seems to be obsessed with the Nazi idea that only German Aryans are of any importance—that the Jews, the Slavs, the Latins, possibly even the British, are decadent weaklings. Precisely the same view was held in Germany twenty-four years ago. Can it be that the German memory is so short?

Troops for Palestine

Lieutenant-General J. G. Dill is now in Palestine, where he has taken over the Supreme Military Command, and 12,000 troops are following him from England. Clearly the British Government proposes to stand no more nonsense from the Arab revolutionaries. For five months they have spread turmoil throughout the Holy Land; and the gravity of the situation can be judged by the very considerable force which Great Britain deems necessary for their suppression. All told, there must now be no fewer than twenty-five battalions of infantry in Palestine. The revolt has lost its original character of a "demonstration"; it has settled down into a steady guerrilla campaign. Few days pass without loss of life, and none passes without widespread destruction of property and more or less serious clashes between British troops and Arabs, or between Arabs and Jews. The arrival of the 12,000 reinforcing soldiers, no doubt, will make an early difference; yet their task, thanks to the difficulties of the Palestinian terrain, will be far from easy, and many British homes may be empty of a husband or a son before peace is restored. Lieutenant-General Dill proposes to take charge as soon as possible. Already the High Commissioner, Sir Arthur Wauchope, has warned the Arab Higher Committee that the strike and the resulting campaign of terrorism must be called off at once. Otherwise, he has pointed out, he can make no further efforts for a settlement, and the reins of government must pass into other hands. The Committee has called a meeting of all the local "soviets" for Thursday, when the High Commissioner will receive his reply. If it is unsatisfactory, the ordinary processes of government will be suspended; martial law will be declared, and General Dill, with his twenty-five battalions, will take charge of Palestine. In spite of this threat, it seems improbable that the reply will be satisfactory. The Higher Committee has issued a statement disclaiming responsibility for the disorders—and implying that it is both unable and unwilling to put a stop to them. It says that the strike was spontaneous throughout the countryside, and was designed as a protest against Great Britain's misuse of her mandate in Palestine. The Arabs will have nothing to do with the proposed Royal Commission, because, as they hold, the recommendations of previous Commissions have not been carried out. They stand firm by their demand that the immigration of Jews shall be stopped, and they make it clear that only on such terms will they lay down their arms. The British Government, of course, could not dare to put an end to immigration, and obviously has now no answer but war. Our hope is that General Dill's show of force will be sufficient to quiet the hostile Arabs without shedding of blood; but so persistent a revolt is unlikely to have so easy an end.

The King's Safety

On July 16th, when the King was returning to Buckingham Palace after the Trooping of the Colour ceremonies in Hyde Park, a loaded revolver was thrown in front of his horse. Yesterday George Andrew McMahon, who had been seen to throw the revolver, was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment under the Treason Act. Thus ends an incident which might have been far more serious. Actually, it does not appear that the King's safety was endangered in the least; for McMahon, although he had plenty of opportunity, seems to have made no effort to fire his weapon. Nevertheless, neither the King's possible danger nor McMahon's motives for his act are relevant—what is important is that a determined assassin, in McMahon's position, would have found nothing to stop him. In Great Britain Royalty trusts more to the affection of subjects than on the Continent; it mingles freely with the people, and does not need to be followed at every step by an armed bodyguard. In one sense that trust is well placed, and the great personal popularity both of King George V. and King Edward VIII. has been their best guarantee of safety. The average English citizen will not hear a word spoken against his King, and even the extremists who dislike Royalty know that they would gain nothing by taking his life. At the same time, the King exposes himself to danger by the mere fact that he is so much in the public eye. An assassination may be unthinkable, so far as political motives are concerned; but there is no guarantee that an attempt may not be made by people with imaginary grievances, eccentrics who wish to advertise themselves at any cost, or actual lunatics. Fortunately, the danger is very small—within the last hundred years less than half-a-dozen "attempts" have been made upon the Sovereign, and not one of them has been more than a gesture—but the latest occurrence should convince the authorities that the danger exists, and should be guarded against more carefully.

Instructions for Living

A meeting of the British Association invariably reveals that mankind goes out of its way to make life for itself more difficult. Zoologists, physiologists, chemists, engineers, educationalists, domestic science experts, psychologists, botanists, mathematicians and economists unite in the conclusion that human beings do not know how to live. Last Thursday no fewer than 1,900 professors and doctors united to tell mankind where it embarked, how far it travelled, and where it got off; and the curious thing is that mankind is inclined to take so little notice of instructions so portentous. Thus Dr. Julian Huxley would have us alter our reproductive habits. He disparages natural selection, since "both specialised and progressive improvement are mere by-products of its action, and are the exceptions rather than the rule." If we used "a few highly endowed individuals to produce all the next generation, all kinds of new possibilities would emerge." For a moment let readers consider the ear-splitting outcry that would arise if such a system were adopted, so that supermen might be born to make of this world a far, far better thing than it has ever been before; and then, if they feel equal to the intolerable effort, let them picture a world more concerned to retain its health than to make more money by working overtime. This passion, according to Dr. Collier, "may drive individuals or groups of men through the stage of fatigue into that of actual illness." Yet such self-abuse is unnecessary; for another doctor warned his audience that "many new operations are being carried on with an almost unbelievable amount of misdirected effort." Dr. Miles was amazed that factory workers should weigh themselves down with heavy overalls, and stand upright to perform tasks which more easily would be completed in a comfortable sitting position. Scores of experts joined in this general denigration, and every one of them seemed to put forward an unanswerable case for immediate reform; but it seems that the difficulties which face them are so gigantic that we may count on another few years of comparative peace.

THE KING FLIES HOME

END OF HOLIDAY ABROAD

The King flew home from his holiday yesterday. His private aeroplane, piloted by Wing-Commander E. H. Fielden, landed at a private aerodrome at Feltham, Middlesex, at 6.30 p.m., having been flown from Zurich. A halt was made at Beauvais for refuelling during the afternoon.

The journey from that point to Feltham occupied an hour and three-quarters.

The King motored in his big black saloon car direct from the aerodrome to Fort Belvedere. With him was Major Ulick Alexander, the Keeper of the Privy Purse, who had gone to the aerodrome to meet the King.

The King arrived at the Fort soon after 7 o'clock. A crowd of people who had waited vainly at Smith's Lawn to see the King arrive went over to Fort Belvedere in the hope of seeing him there. They saw the King, with a very sun-burned face, sitting bareheaded in the back of his car.

The King waved his hand in response to their greeting as he drove in through the gates of his country home. It was a completely informal, quiet home-coming, just as the King wished.

Almost as soon as he got into his house the King plunged into the study of important State papers which had been sent down for him by special messenger.

The King is remaining in the South for only a few days. He will go to Balmoral for his first visit to Deeside at the end of the week, leaving London on Friday night.

MINISTERS TO DISCUSS PALESTINE

MEETING AT END OF THIS WEEK

A meeting of Ministers will be held at No 10 Downing street towards the end of the week, for the purpose of discussing current affairs.

The situation in Palestine and the forthcoming meetings of the League at Geneva are expected to be under review.

WEATHER FORECAST

General Inference.—A shallow depression over Eastern England is moving south-east, and a wedge of high pressure to West of Ireland is moving east. Weather will be fair and rather warm in most districts, but some light rain or showers will occur locally in the north and west, and occasional showers on the east coast.

North-West and South-West Ireland.—Freshening south-westerly winds; mainly fair, apart from scattered showers; average temperature.

North-East and South-East Ireland.—Light westerly winds, becoming south-westerly later; mainly fair; local morning mist or fog; rather warm.

Irish Sea and St. George's Channel.—Light or moderate westerly or south-westerly winds; mainly fair; visibility good; sea slight.

CRITICISM OF DEMOCRACIES

CHANNELS FOR FLOW OF "BOLSHEVIST POISON"

HITLER RESUMES ATTACK ON MOSCOW AND JEWS

EUROPE ALREADY SPLIT INTO TWO HALVES

HERR HITLER ended this year's Nazi Party Congress at Nuremberg last night with another fiery denunciation of Bolshevism. Standing on the floodlit platform of the Congress hall, which was packed to its utmost capacity, the Chancellor branded Bolshevism as a "bestial mad doctrine," declared that the "Moscow Jews will never stop their activity," and prophesied that if the methods of Bolshevist risings succeeded, Europe would go under in a sea of misery and blood.

It had been anticipated that Hitler might state a new line of policy, and might even announce the severance of relations with Russia, but in this respect the forecasts were not realised. It was significant, however, that he referred to the democratic States as "the channel through which Bolshevist poison flowed," and expressed the conviction that no nation would be spared a clear-cut decision in the "final struggle with Marxism."

"When a British parliamentarian says we want to split Europe into two halves, then we reply to this Robinson Crusoe living on his happy British island that this division has taken place already," said Hitler.

In an apparent allusion to the Spanish civil war, Herr Hitler declared: "Wherever we look we see Bolshevism inciting to intervention, to the supply of arms and for money collections. We can regard all this calmly, but if they endanger the Reich, the German people will sweep away from their frontiers those who imagine that they will have a walk-over with the German Army."

"READY FOR EVERY SACRIFICE"

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NUREMBERG, Monday.

"The present time demands men of steel and not weaklings," said the Chancellor towards the end of his speech. "The party now more than ever must see to it that our ideals are spread among the people, and that war is declared on that miserable cleverness which is nothing but cowardice.

"Times are coming when courage and not pale prudence will win. Further, the party must deepen the Socialist idea. But this does not mean Marxism.

"Then we can make it clear to all that no sacrifice is too great for this community. The party must continue its educational work among the people, especially in the coming winter help campaign.

"It does not matter whether the individual wants to; he must. The party must keep up the optimism of the people. Woe to him who does not believe. He is useless; he is only a burden on his people.

THE IRON HEART

"Let us be ready for every sacrifice that the Almighty may demand from us. Then Germany will go through all distress, armed with that metal which makes the knight win—the metal of the iron heart.

"Once more let us tell the Almighty how grateful we are that He enabled us to regain our freedom."

Earlier in his speech he said:—

"What we dreamt of in post-war years has become a reality through the National Socialist idea and the National Socialist leadership. This new Germany is an historic factor. Those abroad who regard things realistically need not regret that Germany's development took this course.

"Nazi doctrine," he continued, "regards the aim of the State as the preservation of the race. This spells a new method for furthering international relations.

"The Nazi State works for its Nation's honour and equality. It does not talk, it acts. The first and most difficult task has been fulfilled by the introduction of the two years' military service law. Thus Germany has freed herself of the consequences of the military mutiny of 1918.

COPYRIGHT

"National-Socialism is Germany's copyright. It cannot be exported. Every nation can mould its life as it likes, provided that it does not grudge us the same rights. National-Socialism is our most valuable German patent. We are Nazis, and, therefore, fighters. We are not missionaries for other people.

"What other nations think or do does not concern us, and if we must explain our doctrine, we do so to reply to unjustified criticism and untruhtful journalism.

"If others say that we are not tolerant, we may say the same of others. The world should take note that it has taken Germany 15 years to become acquainted with international fraternisation on democratic lines.

"It is not matter of concern to us whether other democracies love or hate us. The German nation has lost all respect for such democracies. About 99 per cent. of the German people now stand behind the authoritarian régime.

DEMOCRACIES NOT PERMANENT

"It is not to be wondered at if the democratic States still show us their antipathy. We have never regarded democracies as permanent. We fear that other nations may become the prey of that philosophy which we regard without reservation as our most deadly enemy, namely, Bolshevism.

"We see in Bolshevism a bestial, mad doctrine which is a threat to us. In the past Bolshevism tried to work on our territory, just as it is now trying to push its military forces ever closer to our frontiers.

"We exterminated Bolshevism on our own ground. We warded off the attempt to infect Germany from Moscow. We know that the Moscow Jews well never stop their activity.

"SPANISH METHODS"

"Therefore, we must regard Bolshevism abroad as our enemy. We shall fight it as a world power if it tries to transfer its Spanish methods to Germany. It is not the aim of Bolshevism to free the nations from what is sick in them, but to exterminate all that is healthy. I cannot make a pact with a régime whose first act is not the liberation of workmen, but of the inmates of jails.

"We introduced National-Socialism in Germany because we did not want 98 per cent. of the leading positions in Germany to go into the hands of the Jews, as is the case in Russia."

Herr Hitler continued: "In Germany to-day former factory workers and farm hands hold many prominent positions.

"We oppose Bolshevism because we are humane. We have staged a revolution, but not a single window pane was smashed. We did not shed blood, not because we were too weak to see blood, but because we did not want to cause more suffering than was necessary.

"We think it is better to put 5,000,000 men to work than to burn churches.

FAMINE RUMOUR

"We oppose Bolshevism for economic reasons. There are fresh rumours of another famine in Russia, although Russia was one of the richest countries in the world. If the Soviets have had no success in Russia, what would have happened here if the Jewish Bolshevik economic muddle had reigned in Germany?

"We oppose Bolshevism because we are Socialists. Apart from all this, the German people are so intelligent that the insinuation that they should get their leaders from Moscow must be regarded as an insult."

"Moscow remains Moscow and Germany remains Germany," Hitler went on. "Finally, we oppose Bolshevism because we do not want the German people to be slaughtered for Jewish Bolshevist aims.

"Our Army does not take an oath to spread Nazi ideas in other nations, but to defend Germany against the attacks of others. We cannot negotiate with Jewish Communist leaders.

"Wherever we look we see Bolshevism inciting to intervention, to the supply of arms and for money collections. We can regard all this calmly, but if they endanger the Reich the German people will sweep away from their frontiers those who imagine that they will have a walk-over with the German Army.

DIVIDED

"It must be known by all in these times of revolution that the Germans are masters in their own house. When a British parliamentarian says we want to split Europe into two halves, then we reply to this Robinson Crusoe living on his happy British island that this division has taken place already.

"Irresponsible elements of bourgeois peoples' fronts try to counteract Bolshevism by seeking to satisfy it. We know these social democrats. National Socialism removes these elements in order to clear the field for the final struggle with Marxism.

"Other nations must go this way some day. We are convinced that no nation will be spared a clear-cut decision.

"Politicians in England do not know Bolshevism in their own country. I believe I know more about this than people who have only written about it.

"ASTONISHING"

"When I consider that 28 years ago I earned my living as a small builder's workman and 20 years ago served as a soldier in the War, and for 15 years fought with a handful of men against my opponents, that I was in prison for my ideas, and only four years ago had a chance of coming to power—then is not all this astonishing? This came about because I saw everything from a realistic standpoint and did not let my convictions be taken from me.

"To complete our tasks we need only peace in Europe as well as at home. I do not have to confirm the glory of the German Army by military deeds. Just as I created the Brown Army and the Black Guards to preserve peace at home, so I cannot leave Germany's peace to the arbitrariness of the world about us.

"The world will have no better friend than Germany if it respects us. But Bolshevism must know that the new German Army stands before the gateway of Germany.

"It would be irresponsible if we did not take into account the possibilities of Bolshevist revolution in Europe. I quite believe that many democrats regard me as a 'wild man.'"

EUROPE TO GO UNDER

Hitler then expressed great concern at what he termed the "disintegration of European nations through democracies, which was the channel through which the Bolshevist poison flowed."

"Every successful rising of Bolsevism in one country encourages other countries. If these methods succeed, Europe will go under in a sea of misery and blood.

"I am not surprised at the Bolshevik murders in Spain. We owe it to the Nazi spirit that we have a peaceful Germany. National Socialism will always and everywhere oppose Bolshevism and defeat it."

Herr Hitler then dwelt on the necessity of selecting future leaders of the party according to their merits and their political attitude, and not according to their birth.

WARNING BY THE POPE

CIVILISATION MENACED

EVENTS IN SPAIN DEPLORED

"FLAME OF HATRED AND PERSECUTION"

"SPAIN always has been most dear to our heart, and this is not the first time that great country and her people have suffered martyrdom for the Faith," declared the Pope in an address to 500 Spanish refugees in the Hall of the Swiss Guards at Castel Gandolfo, his summer residence, yesterday.

Denouncing the happenings in Spain the Pope said: "The very foundations of all order, all culture, all civilisation are being menaced; the menace is all the more serious by reason of the satanic hatred against God, and against humanity and the Catholic Church.

HATRED

"The flame of satanic persecution has been re-kindled, and most fiercely in neighbouring Spain—that flame of hatred and persecution which has been confessedly reserved for the Catholic Church and the Catholic religion as being the one real obstacle in the way of those forces which have already given a sample and a measure of themselves in the subversive attacks on every kind of order from Russia to China, from Mexico and South America."

"You are here, beloved ones," His Holiness said, "to tell us of the great tribulation from which you came—tribulation of which you bear on your persons and possessions the signs and visible marks. These are signs and marks of the great battle of suffering which you have borne and which make you a piteous spectacle before our eyes and before the eyes of the world. You have been mulcted and despoiled of all things, you have been hunted and pursued unto the death in cities and in villages, in the dwellings of men and in the solitudes of the mountain tops.

THE SUPREME PENALTY

"On this occasion all the work of centuries is being swept away. Priests and people have suffered the supreme penalty for love of the Faith that was in them, and recent happenings have been such that the whole world has been astonished and grieved.

"The most priceless relics and monuments have been swept away in the flood of vandalism.

"In Spain brother has murdered brother. Civil war is being waged in its full terror. War in any sense is always something to be abhorred; for it arouses the worst instincts of the human race, man seeking man to kill, and to kill as many as possible, and to destroy homes and property. What can be more sad than when war is fratricidal? The blood of a single man shed by his brother is more than enough for all time and for the whole earth.

"What is to be said when we are face to face with the stories of brother killing brother which are constantly being told of in Spain?"

Having made the statement quoted above in regard to the flame of satanic preparation, the Pope continued:—

"Such powers and preparations have been preceded and unfailingly accompanied by a universal, persistent and most astute propaganda, intent on subjecting the whole world to those absurd and disastrous ideologies which, once they have seduced and stirred up the masses, aim at arming them and throwing them madly against every form of institution, human and divine.

FRATRICIDAL CARNAGE

"We must bewail not merely such evils and disasters in general, but more particularly such fratricidal carnage, so many offences against Christian life and dignity, such a ruining of the most sacred and precious heritage of a great and noble people, and of a people so singularly dear to us.

"These happenings in Spain speak to Europe and the whole world, and proclaim once more to what extent the very foundations of all order, of all culture, of all civilisation are being menaced."

This menace, His Holiness added, was the more serious by reason of the truly Satanic hatred against God and against humanity and the Catholic Church. It was his duty, however, to utter a warning against the insidiousness with which the heralds of the forces of subversion were seeking to find common ground for a possible approach and collaboration on the part of Catholics.

"This insidiousness," His Holiness continued, "is dangerous in the extreme, and its purpose is purely and simply to deceive Europe and the world in favour of an unchanging programme of hate, subversion, and destruction by which they are being threatened."

IN NAME OF HUMANITY

The Pope said that he could not forget those who, with purity of intention, had sought to intervene in the Spanish civil war in the name of humanity. Even if their efforts had been without result, nevertheless his gratitude to them was not lessened.

The Holy Father concluded by saying that he would pray for the persecutors of the Church in Spain "that they may be one with us when shortly the rainbow of peace shines forth in the clear sky of Spain."

His Holiness then imparted the Apostolic Blessing. In spite of the deeds and methods of those who were attacking the Church in Spain he also extended to them his Benediction, despite the slanders with which even he himself had been attacked. They were still his sons and the children of God.

The audience was presented by Cardinal Pacelli, Secretary of State, who said that the refugees were asking protection of the Holy Father.

A HOLIDAY IN IRELAND

VISITOR'S VIEWS ON THE FREE STATE

THE INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

By A VISITING JOURNALIST.

MY holiday in your charming country is over. Ireland, from the scenic viewpoint, has proved all "it's cracked-up to be." But there have been some things which have interested me—as a journalist—rather more than the scenery. I refer to the industrial developments which are taking place in the Free State.

Over here the general public do not seem to take much heed of what is commonly called "war talk." On the other side of the Channel we take a very real interest in it—and so would you if you had been through the horrors of bombardment from the air, food rationing and the fears of the last war.

To industrialists the next war holds even greater terrors than the last. Aerial bombardment has become more deadly in the years between 1918 and to-day. Now both the British Government and the industrialists of Great Britain have the problem of removing their main sources of supply as far as possible from any danger of bombardment from the Continent.

THE WESTWARD TREND

Perhaps, you are already aware that the British War Office is preparing to establish a great arsenal—on the lines of Woolwich arsenal—at Bridgend, in Wales, twenty miles from Cardiff. This shows that the danger to Woolwich, with the silver line of the Thames pointing to it all the way from the coast, has been fully appreciated. On the Thames, too, is the great oil storage dépôt of the London and Thameshaven Oil Wharves organisation.

Oil is quite as important as munitions in modern warfare, so I was not really very surprised to find that the big London organisation was interesting itself in the creation of a big national refinery in Ireland. It was just another indication of the westward trend of important industries—away from the danger spots.

A MUNITIONS FACTORY

I have already referred to the arsenal to be built at Bridgend; during my visit to Ireland I have been told of plans to establish another munitions factory down in County Clare. Sporting ammunition is being made at Earl's Island, Galway, at the present time, and I gathered from my informant that the organisation engaged in this work is related in some way to Imperial Chemical Industries—one of our most important trusts across the Channel. I am not an expert, but there does not appear to be a very big step in transforming your Earl's Island establishment into one capable of producing ammunition for purposes other than sporting.

Thinking over these features the other evening, the title of Shaw's amusing play, "John Bull's Other Island," struck me as being very apt. Subsequent conversations about Irish industries served to endorse this opinion.

BRITAIN'S LARDER

Textiles are to be made down in Athlone, by a Belgium-backed company. Canned meat is already being produced in at least two factories—Roscrea and Waterford; industrial alcohol will be distilled at several centres by a Government-controlled organisation. It certainly looks that Ireland will be helped along the road to prosperity by these new industries, while, at the same time, the country will become "John Bull's" larder if, and when, a war breaks out.

Your cattle and horses have been supplied to Britain for very many years and I think that many Irish farmers still look back on the days of the Great War as their "boom" period. These "furnishings" for Britain's larder may be necessary again, perhaps sooner than we think, and I learn that Ireland is now preparing to make its own feedingstuffs for the cattle in a factory at Dundalk.

Wheat is part of the staple food of the people in time of peace or war, and the partially-effective submarine blockade of the last war clearly demonstrated how necessary the home-grown wheat policy would be in the future—even if it had to be virtually spoon-fed by Governments.

THE NORTH'S INDUSTRIES

On wings of Belfast linen the Allied aeroplanes flew to victory in 1918. Those linen mills are still in existence, and now an aircraft factory is to be added to the North's industries at the shipbuilding yards of Belfast. I make no apology for mentioning Northern Ireland in the same breath as the Free State, because I do not think that the quite absurd frontier around the six North-Eastern counties would be very important in a national emergency.

The Royal Air Force has a base in County Antrim—the strength of its units there was increased not long ago. Now, on the River Shannon, by arrangement between the Governments of Great Britain and the Irish Free State (the countries on the other side of the Atlantic are not important so far as European defence is concerned), a great air base is to be built for civil purposes just where "civil" aviation ceases to be "civil" and becomes military will always be a subject of argument. But this base and the rights officially reserved to Britain in the Anglo-Irish Treaty with regard to harbours on the Irish coast just endorse my opinion about "John Bull's Other Island."

I may be wrong, but that is the way I see it!

[The address was broadcast from the Vatican Wireless Station, and relayed over Italy and a large number of other countries, including the Irish Free State and the United States of America. In Dublin the reception was good.]

RECEIVED BY THE POPE

SPANISH BISHOPS, PRIESTS AND NUNS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Monday.

There was a moving scene in the hall of the Swiss Guards here to-day after the Pope had addressed 500 refugees from Spain. His audience included the Bishops of Cartagena, Tortosa and Vich, eighty priests and 140 nuns.

Cardinal Pacelli, the Papal Secretary of State, sent for each of the three bishops in turn to present them to His Holiness. Each bishop bowed down to kiss the Pope's foot, but the Pope immediately raised him and embraced him affectionately.

Many of the Spanish nuns present had only arrived in Italy yesterday, and they were wearing ordinary clothes.

Several Spanish families were there, too, and also the Spanish Naval Attaché in Rome.

"THRILLER" IN COURT

FOREIGN POWER AND THE KING

SECRET WORK FOR WAR OFFICE

STRANGE DEFENCE IN McMAHON CASE

GEORGE ANDREW McMAHON, who was convicted at the Old Bailey, London, yesterday, on one of the three counts brought against him following the revolver incident on Constitution Hill when the King was returning from the Trooping of the Colours, told in the witness box a sensational story of a plot by a foreign Power to shoot the King.

His evidence, which was compared by the prosecution to "Oppenheim at his best, or even Edgar Wallace at his worst," was heard with tense interest by a packed court.

The jury, after an absence of ten minutes, found McMahon guilty of "producing a revolver near the person of the King with intent to alarm His Majesty."

Mr. Justice Greaves-Lord passed sentence of twelve months' hard labour, and added: "I am quite satisfied that you never at any moment had any intention of harming His Majesty."

EYE-WITNESSES' EVIDENCE

Civilian and police witnesses stated that they saw the prisoner in the crowd on Constitution Hill awaiting the Royal procession, and saw him throw the revolver as the King was passing. "I saw," said Mrs. Yeoman, of Leytonstone, "that the King had stopped saluting and was staring in McMahon's direction. I looked back again and McMahon was in a position with his arm up. My eyes were rooted on the object from the moment it left his hand until it hit the horse."

A policeman said that the revolver fell under the forelegs of the King's horse.

Inspector Kidd said that on being told the date to which he was remanded McMahon said: "I shall be dead before then. I wanted to make my protest. I intended to shoot myself in front of the King, but I lost my head."

Superintendent John Sands said that he had not been able to ascertain if McMahon had been getting information for the authorities, which necessitated the carrying of a revolver.

In his cross-examination of Superintendent Sands, Mr. St. John Hutchinson, counsel for McMahon, asked: "Do you know that on the Tuesday before this occurrence Inspector Cooper went to see the defendant?"

Superintendent Sands—I am told so.

On the next day, the very evening before this occurrence, Inspector Clark went to see him?—Yes, sir.

SECRET SERVICE?

I am going to suggest this man told Inspector Clark that something of this sort was going to occur and the people concerned were going to meet in the Express Dairy?—I cannot answer as to what this man told Inspector Clark.

Mr. Hutchinson said that on a charge of attempting to endanger life it was of paramount importance that this man was telling the police all about it the day before.

Mr. Hutchinson read a letter which, he said, McMahon wrote to Sir John Simon, and which arrived on the morning of the incident. In this McMahon stated that he had for years been a victim of an organised persecution by Sir John's hirelings, and that in default of "full satisfaction" within fourteen hours he would exercise his own prerogative.

Superintendent Sands agreed that McMahon had made complaints against two officers, had been sentenced for criminal libel, and released after seven weeks' imprisonment. He had sent petitions to the present King and to King George, but none contained threats.

Mr. Hutchinson—Has he been in touch with the M.I.5, the secret part of the War Office, since October, 1935?

Inspector Sands—I can say he has been in touch with M.I.5. I cannot tell you the value or otherwise of the information.

TWO COUNTS WITHDRAWN

At the close of the case for the prosecution the Attorney-General, Sir Donald Somervell, on the suggestion of the Judge, withdrew two of the three counts against McMahon, and the jury returned formal verdicts of "not guilty" on those counts. They were: Unlawfully possessing a firearm and ammunition with intent to endanger life; and presenting near the person of the King a pistol with intent to break the public peace, or whereby the public peace might be in danger.

McMahon was the only witness called by the defence. In answer to his counsel, Mr. St. John Hutchinson, he plunged immediately into his amazing story. Briefly, it was that a foreign Power had tried to bribe McMahon to shoot the King, and that, if the plot failed, another attempt at assassination would be made in France. McMahon strongly denied that he intended to harm the King. He said that he threw the pistol along the ground because he did not want to shoot.

£150 TO SHOOT THE KING

He described how, at the end of October last, he got into touch with a foreign Power who wanted him to do spying work. He reported it to the War Office, and kept in continual touch with the officials there.

He was employed on unessential matters at first, but then the people at the Embassy of this Power began to speak of his grievances against the police, and tried to inflame him against the British Government and the British nation.

Arrangements were made that the King should be attacked at the Trooping of the Colour. McMahon was to get £150 for shooting the King, and it was arranged that he should escape by standing at the back of the crowd and having nine other men with him.

"I am afraid I was not really myself," said McMahon. "I took some of the money and thought I might be able to impart information to the Government. I asked them to listen to my story and send some responsible person to investigate it.

NO HARMFUL INTENTION

"I never had any intention of doing it at all. I threw the pistol along the ground. I had never any intention of alarming His Majesty—rather to save him."

He alleged during cross-examination that one of the men engaged in the plot had been in the court that morning.

Later he made a dramatic outburst. "I want to go to prison," he declared. "I want you to give me the heaviest sentence you can. It is only by remaining in prison that I can save my life."

The name of the foreign Power with which McMahon alleged he had been in communication was not disclosed in court.

A FOREIGN POWER

At the request of his counsel he wrote the name of the Embassy on a slip of paper, which was handed to the judge and jury and the Attorney-General.

Mr. St. John Hutchinson asked—Were

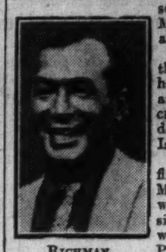
OCEAN RECORD BROKEN

ACHIEVEMENT OF U.S. FLYERS

FORCED LANDING IN NEWFOUNDLAND

"Harry" Richman and "Dick" Merrill, the Atlantic flyers, who left Southport at 3.3 a.m. yesterday, and who, Reuter reports, landed in Newfoundland at 8.47 last night, are 6 hours 16 minutes inside the East to West Atlantic record set up by Mrs. Beryl Markham a week ago.



RICHMAN.

The Americans did the crossing in 17 hours 44 minutes, and Mrs. Markham's crossing from Abingdon to Cape Breton Island took 24 hours.

Mrs. Markham's flight broke "Jim" Mollison's record, which had stood since August, 1932, when he crossed from Portmarnock, near Dublin, to New Brunswick in 30 hours 10 minutes.

Mr. Mollison's flight was only 18 minutes better than that of the late Sir Charles Kingsford Smith, who crossed from Portmarnock to New York in September, 1930, in 30 hours 28 minutes.

SEEN OVER IRELAND

Lady Peace, the aeroplane in which Richman and Merrill made the crossing, was sighted over the Irish coast at 4.15 yesterday morning, an hour and twelve minutes after they had taken off. The machine flew over the south end of Lambay Island and crossed the Portrane estuary at a low altitude. Patches of low, heavy raincloud partly obscured the starlit sky, and the machine was visible only for a few moments. The drone of the engine could be heard for some minutes before the aeroplane was sighted, and when about a mile from Portrane the engine was heard to splutter slightly, and then pick up again as the Lady Peace disappeared in a westerly direction.

MERRILL.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ST. JOHNS (NEWFOUNDLAND), Monday.

Merrill and Richman landed in a bog two and a half miles from Musgrave Harbour, in the Fogo district, at 8.47 p.m. British Summer Time. They are reported to be uninjured.

PROPELLER DAMAGED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Monday.

An unsigned telegram received by the Eastern Air Lines from Musgrave Harbour, where the Transatlantic flyers came down in a bog, says:—"Made forced landing on account of gas. Propeller damaged."

No mention is made in the telegram of anyone being injured.

Another telegram has been received, signed "Richman and Merrill," in which the Atlantic flyers state: "Marooned at Musgrave Harbour, 150 miles from Harbour Grace. We need a mechanic and a battery. A small ship can land at the beach where we are."

ARBITRATION OR NATIONALISATION

GOVERNMENT ACTS IN FRENCH STRIKE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Monday.

The textile employers at Lille to-night were confronted with two alternatives. Either they can accept the Government proposal for arbitration, which would probably mean that they will have to sign a collective contract with their employés, giving them a 40-hour week and a rise in wages, or else they can refuse and see their industry virtually industrialised.

Although they have so far rejected Government arbitration, they still have twenty-four hours in which to make up their minds. M. Blum's reported demand of yesterday that they should accept within forty-eight hours does not expire until to-morrow.

The possibility of a general strike over the whole of France owing to the employers' uncompromising attitude at Lille was envisaged here to-night.

The letter sent to M. Blum after their meeting to-day, which rejects Government arbitration, contains the following passage:—

"If you take upon yourselves, to the absolute limit the law allows, the initiative of coercing the employers, you may do so, but you cannot compel us to ratify these measures."

The Government has asked for an explanation of the implications contained in this paragraph, and is awaiting a reply.

M. Salengro, Minister of the Interior, told Reuter to-night that the Government was determined to settle the dispute as soon as possible.

"After the Government has spoken as arbitrator it will be incumbent on the workers to see that their verdict is carried out," he added.

STARHEMBERG DEPOSED

VIENNA HEIMWEHR'S DECISION

"TIMES" TELEGRAM.

VIENNA, Monday.

The Vienna Heimwehr unanimously resolved to-night to depose Prince Starhemberg as its leader, and to appoint Major Fey.

Prince Starhemberg was not present at the meeting, nor was Major Fey; but after the appointment had been made Major Fey was summoned and informed of the decision. He made his acceptance of the post conditional on the Chancellor's giving his approval, which, it is thought, will be readily given.

The Chancellor has been kept informed of the dissatisfaction of the Vienna Heimwehr with Prince Starhemberg.

The Prince has thus been ousted from every position he has held in Austrian political life since he was Vice-Chancellor, except only that of leader of the Austrian Sports Front, and that of head of the Austrian Mothers' Relief Department.

"LA LINEA NOT SAFE"

PROTESTS AT GIBRALTAR

CLOSING OF REFUGEE CAMP

GOVERNMENT ISSUES WARNING

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

GIBRALTAR, Monday.

THE police had to form cordons round Government House to-day, when British refugees held another demonstration against the decision to close the camp in which they have been living. Several soldiers of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, who were on duty, promptly fixed bayonets. The Fire Brigade was summoned and stood by, ready to turn their hoses on the demonstrators.

The disorder began when three hundred refugee women and children marched through the main street. "We do not want to return to La Linea," they shouted. "The place is not yet safe. We are Britishers, and, therefore, have a right to remain in Gibraltar, where we were born."

Those who have been accommodated at the camp are British subjects, who live in normal times on Spanish territory, the wage-earners coming daily to Gibraltar to work. They claim that, although it has been decided to close their camp, over one thousand Spanish Fascists, Communists, Syndicalists, and their sympathisers are being allowed to remain in Gibraltar.

The demonstrators were greatly excited, but, faced by the military and police, they dispersed.

EMERGENCY CAMP

A warning issued from the Colonial Secretary's Office was to-day posted outside public buildings. This stated:

"The camp was established purely as an emergency measure seven weeks ago, and the decision to close it down was taken after careful consideration of all factors, including public policy, medical and sanitary grounds, the present situation at La Linea and neighbourhood, etc.

"Over 3,000 Britishers continue to live at La Linea in safety, and the Government is satisfied there is no valid reason why all the refugees from La Linea should not return to their homes there. In the event of danger arising in that town, all possible steps will be taken to enable Britishers to take temporary shelter in Gibraltar.

"It must be manifest that sufficient and suitable accommodation for all Britishers is not at present available at Gibraltar. Therefore, the unfortunate demonstrations which have taken place cannot be justified."

DUNLOP COMPANY'S BIG DEAL

Shareholders in the India Tyre and Rubber Company, Ltd., Inchinnan, Renfrewshire, agreed, at a meeting in Glasgow yesterday, to the sale of the undertaking to the Dunlop Rubber Company for £1,131,000. (See Financial Paragraphs in Page 12, Column 7.)

CARLIST FLAG IN SAN SEBASTIAN

REBELS ADMIT 100 KILLED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

RABAT (FRENCH MOROCCO), Monday.

Broadcasts from insurgent stations picked up here include one from Jerez de la Frontera, which states that the reorganisation of San Sebastian has now begun. Several shops were reopened yesterday, and the Carlist flag is floating from all buildings.

Families with insurgent sympathies who had gone into hiding while the Government was in possession, have returned to their homes. It is reported by Seville Radio that the insurgents lost a hundred killed during the final assault on San Sebastian.

In Andalusia (Southern Spain) it was stated that the insurgents had occupied Campo Almaye, killing seventeen of the local inhabitants and releasing a number of women and children who had been imprisoned there.

TO DEFEND BILBAO

FORTY THOUSAND MEN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BARCELONA, Monday.

Bilbao has forty thousand defenders within her environs and six thousand at Loyola, to the south-east, according to an influential official of the Spanish merchant marine, who has arrived here from Bilbao.

"Unfortunately they are mostly unarmed or badly armed and lack artillery and machine-guns," he said, "but they are fired with a wonderful courage."

He said that the Basque Nationalists were at one with the Government forces in their opposition to militarism, and this was the reason for their support of the Government.

"It is natural that they should struggle to the finish against insurgents who wish to establish in Spain the dictatorship of the sword.

"They are firmly decided not to allow Bilbao to follow San Sebastian into enemy hands."

GOVERNMENT SUCCESSES

In Western Asturias the Government militia defeated a small detachment of insurgents forming part of the column which was reported yesterday to have been broken up. The insurgents, it is claimed, left a number dead and a quantity of arms.

The communiqué adds that on the Aragon front the Catalan forces are continuing to advance in the region of Tardienta.

It is claimed that on the southern front, in the neighbourhood of Cordova, one triple-engined insurgent 'plane was brought down and a number of insurgent detachments were bombed.

The bombardment of the Alcazar at Toledo was continued to-day without reply from the besieged insurgents.

NO SURRENDER

In the meantime the insurgent leaders there have rejected the attempted mediation of Señor Moyado, Chilean Ambassador to Madrid, who had been trying to save the lives of the women, children, and old men.

On his arrival in Toledo the Ambassador had obtained the consent of the leaders of the Government forces there that the lives of persons permitted to leave the Alcazar should be spared, and that they should be quartered in the convents of the town. It was agreed that the Chilean flag should fly over the buildings, and that the refugees should be provisioned.

The Government Commander agreed to convey the proposals to the insurgents and forward their reply to the Premier, Señor Largo Caballero. It was learnt to-night that the reply was a refusal to accept these terms.

TALAVERA SUCCESS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LISBON, Monday.

Baiuela Castle, near Talavera, giving an excellent defensive position, has been captured by the Spanish insurgents, according to the correspondent of the Diario de Noticias on that front.

The slow progress of the insurgents toward the capture of Toledo is due, he reports, to the fact that their forces are aiming at several objectives at the same time.

During the battle for Baiuela Castle, five chaser 'planes of the insurgents' air force took on two 'planes which were supporting the Government troops and brought them down.

A large number of Spanish refugees attended a special Mass in the Lisbon Cathedral yesterday with intercessions to San Isidro, patron saint of Madrid, for the success of the insurgents in Spain.

FRANCO'S BROTHER MAY FLY ATLANTIC

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

Major Ramon Franco, brother of the Spanish insurgent leader, is considering the possibility of making a flight to Spain to join his brother's army, states the Washington Star.

After his dismissal from the post of Air Attaché at the Spanish Embassy here, Major Franco communicated with his brother, announcing his readiness to enlist in the insurgent cause.

He laid down the condition of his enlistment that the dictatorship which he expects to arise from the Spanish conflict should be representative of the whole Spanish people, and not merely of the aristocracy, monarchists, Church or landowners.

WAR "BRIEFS"

The insurgents still holding out in the ruined Alcazar at Toledo have refused to accept the mediation of the Chilean Ambassador in Madrid, who had endeavoured to arrange with them to leave the besieged area on favourable terms.

The British steamer Gibel Zerjon was again stopped by a Spanish Government destroyer when on her way to Melilla yesterday. British warships raced out and enabled her to proceed on her voyage.

Effective bombardment of insurgent positions was carried out yesterday near Talavera and Santa Olalla, states a communiqué issued by the Ministry of War. On the Guadarrama front Government artillery dispersed a concentration of insurgent forces.

CANOEING ACCIDENT

YOUNG WOMAN DROWNED

A twenty-two years old Cowes (Isle of Wight) girl, who was on a visit to her sister at the married quarters at Cowley Barracks, Oxford, was drowned yesterday in a canoeing accident opposite the University boathouse, on the Isis.

She was accompanied by a male friend. Neither could swim. The canoe apparently capsized, and the girl disappeared immediately.

The attention of boatmen was attracted by a man clinging to the upturned craft. He was hauled out in an exhausted condition, and it was then learned that the girl was missing. Two New College undergraduates who were sculling at the time dived repeatedly in an effort to find the girl, but failed.

Dragging operations were started, and the body was recovered in 15 feet of water. The name of the girl has not yet been disclosed.

THE KING'S NEW HORSE

POLICE CHARGER THAT WON AT "ROYAL"

Salford City Council Watch Committee yesterday sanctioned the gift to the King, subject to his approval, Cherry Grove, a chestnut gelding which has seen two years' service with the Salford Mounted Police.

Cherry Grove, which went "on patrol" in Salford in April, 1934, took a first prize at the Royal Agricultural Show at Bristol in July this year. It has won many other prizes. It stands over sixteen hands.

The Crown Equerry, Colonel Sir Arthur E. Erskine, heard of Cherry Grove when, in the course of his duties, he was seeking a suitable horse to buy to join the other chargers in the King's stable.

Sir Arthur is responsible for the maintenance of the Royal mews, under the direction of the Master of the Horse, the Duke of Beaufort.

THE QUEEN MARY AS OPERATING THEATRE

NO NEED TO SLACKEN SPEED

Dr. E. C. Butler, the young surgeon on the Queen Mary, which reached Southampton yesterday from New York, performed operations for appendicitis on the liner's outward and homeward voyages.

The operations were carried out while the liner was steaming at 29 knots, but the giant vessel was so steady that it was not necessary to slow her up.

On the outward voyage Dr. Butler's patient was Mark Hamer, the liner's assistant barkeeper; and, on returning to England, an operation was performed on a tourist passenger.

Both made excellent progress afterwards.

HITLER'S SPEECH

HITLER ADDRESSES HIS TROOPS

"Germans have always been good soldiers," declared Herr Hitler in the afternoon to a great gathering of sections of the Army. Throughout the day men from almost all branches of Germany's armed might endeavoured to show to the nation's leaders, the people and foreign observers that the remark is true of the present, says Reuter.

Nuremberg, on the closing day of the Nazi Party Congress, has resounded with the tramp of goose-stepping thousands, the noisy rush of tanks and armoured cars, and the roar of hundreds of General Goering's fighting 'planes.

Seventeen thousand soldiers and naval detachments, 1,900 Army horses, tanks, light and heavy artillery, and four hundred aeroplanes were mobilised at the great Zeppelin field to give Germans a display of the modern equipment of the force which Herr Hitler has created.

Even the airship Hindenburg was enlisted.

MACHINE ON FIRE

Anti-aircraft guns fired shells at the rate of four a second. Next came the display of cavalry, then of a hundred tanks, and a mock battle with the motorised forces.

At the end of this spectacle the Nuremberg Municipal Fire Brigade had to come to the aid of the German Army; for one of the motor cycles burst into flames and spread a circle of fire round it which could not be extinguished for some time.

Thousands of people and troops assembled on the Zeppelin field to hear a brief address from General von Blomberg, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

Chancellor Hitler arrived accompanied by his deputy, Rudolf Hess, Field Marshal von Blomberg, Generals von Fritz and Goering, and Admiral of the Fleet Raeder. He took the salute of the flag company of the army, and shortly afterwards addressed the gathering in the presence of the Diplomatic Corps and the Military Attachés of most of the foreign missions.

WAR FLAGS

Addressing the troops Hitler said: "For the third time you are here on this field; for the first time the war flags of the new Reich fly before you. This shows you the change which has taken place in the meantime.

"We are proud of our peace work, and it is your task to safeguard this work. If millions of people in factories and offices stake their life for their work, then it is only reasonable that every one of us is ready to risk his life for the preservation of what has been accomplished.

"You, my soldiers, have not been called to serve a frivolous Chauvinism, but to stand on guard before our work, our people and our Germany. When I see you before me I know that this guard will stand firm. Germans have always been good soldiers. If Germany once collapsed, it was due to those at home breaking down. To-day the German nation stands as upright as you, my comrades. Germany is once more worthy of her soldiers.

SERVICE FOR HEALTH

"People, parties and army form one indissoluble unity. Serious times may be ahead of us, but they will never find us wavering, discouraged or cowardly. We all know that Heaven cannot be attained by weaklings. We all know that cowards are not able to preserve liberty, and that the future belongs to the brave and courageous.

"The two years of military service which I demand from you for Germany I return to you with ten years of healthier life. What you give to the fatherland in your youth you will get back later, for you will be a strong and hardened generation whose health has not suffered in factories and offices."

THE ABBEY THEATRE

AN EXCELLENT NEW PLAY

"The Silver Jubilee," by Cormac O'Daly.

Rev. Michael O'Carroll	Michael J. Dolan
Rev. William O'Dowd	Fred Johnson
John Joseph Barrett	Cyril Cusack
Mary Casey	Aideen O'Connor
John Casey	P. J. Carolan
Julia Casey	May Craig
Hannah	Ann Clery

One has come to expect good dialogue in any new Irish play, and to be thankful if the rest of it—the characters, the plot, and the construction—is not unduly bad. "The Silver Jubilee" is a pleasant surprise; one does not look for so much in a new Abbey playwright. Mr. Cormac O'Daly has not attempted anything very ambitious, but, for a first attempt, his comedy shows unusual skill in the handling of dramatic material, and a real power to present lifelike people on the stage. His next play will be even more worth seeing.

"The Silver Jubilee" has quite a simple plot. Young John Joseph Barrett has got Mary Casey into trouble, and the parents—one enraged, the other distracted—come round to the presbytery to thresh the matter out. Father O'Carroll finds his powers of diplomacy taxed to the highest; for although the mother and the erring John Joseph are willing that a marriage should be arranged, Mary asserts that she never wants to see John Joseph again, and her father wants to see him only to massacre him. For about ten minutes of the first act it seemed as if the play was going to be a satire on small-town religious hypocrisy, but it turned out to be a straightforward comedy, in which the kindly tact of the priest brings about the happy ending. It is very neatly constructed, except for a rather obvious dénouement.

The characters make this play. Mr. O'Daly has painted them with a great deal of insight and with obvious relish, and they all have individuality—except, perhaps, the "heroine," who is a rather lifeless and uninteresting creature. His greatest care has gone into the study of the two priests, and especially into the very human figure of old Father O'Carroll, whose doubts as to whether he really is doing any good in his parish are resolved (so far as the audience is concerned) by his handling of the Casey affair and his deep understanding of human weaknesses. Father O'Dowd, apparently introduced only as a foil to Father O'Carroll, is not less interesting. He is a young priest, self-confident, good-natured and good-humoured, but he is an irritating figure, with his continual high spirits and his weak jokes.

John Casey is another excellent sketch as the outraged father, and is drawn with far more perception than the character might suggest. John Joseph Barrett, a puzzled, likeable young man, who is only anxious to "do the right thing," and Mrs. Casey, who is mainly preoccupied with what the neighbours will think, are also very good. Mary Casey, as noted already, is rather flat, and Hannah, the priest's housekeeper, is too farcical a figure for her surroundings, though she is amusing enough for the first twenty minutes.

The cast played together very well. Michael J. Dolan, as was to be expected, got full value out of Father O'Carroll, and Cyril Cusack, Fred Johnson, P. J. Carolan and Ann Clery were about the best of the others.

"The Silver Jubilee" was followed by a revival of "The Piper"—a one-act play by Conal O'Riordan, which sways disturbingly between rather good satire and rather bad melodrama.

NON-INTERVENTION IN SPAIN

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE

REPRESENTATIVES OF 26 COUNTRIES

A COMMUNIQUÉ was issued last night concerning the second meeting of the International Committee for the application of the agreement regarding non-intervention in Spain, which was held in the Locarno Room at the Foreign Office, London, yesterday. It states:—

"The meeting was attended by representatives of the following countries:—Albania, Austria, Belgium, the United Kingdom, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Esthonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Irish Free State, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Roumania, U.S.S.R., Sweden, Turkey, and Yugoslavia.

"The Committee had under consideration certain questions relating to the scope of the agreement, and the delegates undertook, where necessary, to obtain the instructions of their Governments at the earliest moment possible in regard to the questions submitted.

"The Committee re-affirmed the resolution adopted at its first meeting that the proceedings at its meetings should be treated as strictly confidential, subject to the issue of an agreed communiqué at the conclusion of each meeting.

SUB-COMMITTEE FORMED

"After a general exchange of views, it was agreed to appoint an informal sub-committee to assist the Chairman in the day-to-day work of the Committee. It was agreed that this sub-committee should be composed of representatives of the following countries:—Belgium, United Kingdom, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Italy, Sweden, U.S.S.R.

"The first meeting of this sub-committee will be held at the Foreign Office at four to-morrow afternoon (Tuesday).

"The Committee took note with satisfaction that the majority of the representatives on the Committee had already furnished to the Secretariat copies of the legislative and administrative measures adopted by their respective countries to give effect to the agreement for non-intervention. It was arranged that the documents so submitted should be collated as soon as possible for the consideration of the Committee.

SECRET SECT IN THE BELGIAN CONGO

ANARCHIST DOCTRINE TAUGHT

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.

BRUSSELS, Monday.

About a hundred members of a strange sect, which calls itself the Kitawala, have been arrested in the Belgian Congo, and a judicial inquiry into the movement is being held. It is believed that one or two Europeans are its leaders in the Congo, although the headquarters of the sect is thought to be in Rhodesia or the Cape.

Kitawala is essentially anarchist in doctrine, based on vague translations of texts from the Bible. Its disciples are promised an earthly paradise as soon as the "reign of electricity" is complete. There will be equality among all men, but first the power of the three great enemies—Government, Church and Finance—must be broken.

The meetings are generally held at night. Novices are given an elaborate ceremony or initiation, including baptism by total immersion. They take an oath never to divulge any word about the sect under pain of heavy punishment—hence the difficulty now experienced of finding anything definite about it beyond its evident Communism.

CHILD NEGLECT CHARGE

EVIDENCE IN A BELFAST CASE

"If the evidence of the inspector was only half true, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. I don't think he has exaggerated one tittle."

This remark was made by Mr. J. H. Campbell, R.M., at Belfast Summons Court yesterday to Mrs. Martha Lemon, who, with James Curry, was charged with neglecting three children. Both the defendants live at Great George's street.

The Resident Magistrate inquired if any relationship existed between the defendants, and Mrs. Lemon, who appeared, replied that Curry was the father of two of the children.

Inspector John Haslam, of the N.S.P.C.C., said that the female defendant had been living apart from her husband for some years, and the man Curry was living with her. On June 15 witness inspected the small room in which they were living, and found that there was practically no furniture, very little food, and the bed was filthy. The mother had the appearance of having been drinking, and had two black eyes. Subsequently the defendants left that address, and he traced them to George's street.

"SINGING AND CAROUSING"

Witness went on to give details of subsequent visits, and mentioned that on July 5 he saw both defendants. There was no improvement in cleanliness or in the bedding. The male defendant said he was the father of two children and would provide for them. On August 15 the room was very filthy, and singing and carousing was being carried on in the next room, in which the mother was with other women. The place was quite unsuitable for children.

Later he visited the room, which was in a frightful condition. One of the boys was practically naked, and going around the floor, which was filthy. The mother was lying on the bed with a nine months old baby, and was apparently in a drunken sleep. Later on the same day he returned with a constable and awakened the woman, who was abusive and excitable.

Constable Michael J. Gallagher said on August 15 he saw the woman lying in bed drunk.

Lemon told the magistrate that she would take the pledge, and it would not occur again.

"You are not fit to be in charge of children," said Mr. Campbell, in adjourning the case for two months.

ECHO OF BELFAST MURDERS

The murders of Andrew Anderson and his wife, Elizabeth Anderson, at Hooker street, Belfast, on January 11th, 1922, were recalled at Belfast Recorder's Court yesterday, when application was made by the Rev. Dr. Henry Montgomery, who had been appointed guardian of the orphan children, to pay out £25 of the share of Thomas Anderson, one of the minors.

Dr. Montgomery told the Recorder that the money was required in connection with the apprenticeship of the boy, who was doing well.

Judge Thompson made the order sought.

Mr. Samuel McKeown (Messrs. Carson and McDowell) represented the applicant.

SITUATION IN PALESTINE

ARAB REPLY TO GOVERNMENT

GENERAL DILL TAKES STOCK

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JERUSALEM, Monday.

HAVING failed to agree as to whether or not the Arab strike should be called off, the Arab Higher Committee has summoned a meeting of local and national committees throughout Palestine for Thursday.

This general meeting will decide on the reply to be made to Sir Arthur Wauchope, the High Commissioner.

The Arab Higher Commiftee have issued a long statement in reply to that made by the British Government. The statement points out that the Committee is not responsible for the strike, which was "spontaneous throughout the countryside against British policy." They require independence and cancellation of the mandate. They do not agree that their requests for a stoppage of immigration and for the restriction of land sales was contrary to the mandate.

"It is not true," adds the statement, "that the strike is continuing because of intimidation. We have no faith in the Royal Commission, because the recommendations of previous Commissions have not been carried out. We strongly protest against the statement that the Arabs are not willing to accept the mediation of Arab kings and princes. This would be welcomed, and we are still sincerely wishing for such mediation."

The Committee's statement, made on August 31, declared that a continuation of the strike, pending the efforts of Nuri Pasha for mediation, was agreed to by other Arab kings and princes.

"It is obvious that the British Government, with the Jews, used this to say that the Arabs did not accept the mediation," adds the statement.

"The Committee still believe that Nuri Pasha's mediation is the only way to end the deadlock, and to open a new era in which the Government could show goodwill towards the Arabs, and re-establish peace in the Holy Land."

A LULL

The new Commander-in-Chief in Palestine (Lieutenant-General J. G. Dill) spent his first day here in sizing up the situation and preparing his campaign, in conference with the heads of the forces. He is staying with the High Commissioner (Sir Arthur Wauchope). A section of the King David Hotel has been taken for his general headquarters.

The twenty-four hours since General Dill's arrival yesterday have passed off quietly. The only incidents reported to-day are the throwing of a bomb in the old City of Jerusalem and the cutting of a number of orange trees in the countryside. A clerk was injured by the bomb.

Searches of villages by troops are proceeding, and a number of persons have been arrested.

McMAHON CASE

you introduced to the Power in question—I am trying to put the question without saying who it was—by an English person?

McMahon—Yes.

Did he belong to a certain political body in England?—Yes.

Had that political body the same objects as the Government to which you were introduced?—Yes.

Did he, at the Embassy, I think, introduce you to a certain baron?—Yes, sir.

The Attorney-General said in his cross-examination—"I am going to suggest that this story about the plot is a product of your imagination?"

"I wish to God it were," replied McMahon.

AUTHORITIES SCEPTICAL

The Attorney-General—Inquiries were made on the purported information you gave in April, and the authorities were satisfied there was nothing whatever in your story.

McMahon—That may be their view.

"The only danger to the King came from yourself," retorted the Attorney-General.

McMahon—Yes, because of the bungling of the officials.

"You did not want me to come in and give evidence," said McMahon, a little later. "You wanted to give me a light sentence. The offer was made to me if I pleaded guilty I would get off with a light sentence. Why was that offer made to me but to hide the bungling of other people?"

The Attorney-General—No one wants to hide anything.

FOREIGN VIEW OF IRISH

Mr. Hutchinson said, in his concluding speech, that he did not wish to say anything to exacerbate foreign countries. There could be no doubt that McMahon had been employed by a foreign Power and had been in close touch with the Embassy of that Power. He was an Irishman, and, to foreigners, Irishmen were supposed to have been nurtured in hatred against Great Britain.

"One of the most frightening parts of this case," added Mr. Hutchinson, "was that, although the police were told, the man did not seem to have been under any observation at all. A most frightful tragedy might have resulted if the man had been serious."

Mr. Justice Greaves-Lord said, in passing sentence, that the jury had found what he thought was the only possible verdict upon the evidence.

"I will say no more than this," he continued, addressing the prisoner, "about your other story—I can well understand the jury not being misled by the story you told to-da."

McMahon was taken from the Old Bailey by a prison van to Wormwood Scrubbs.

NAME OF THE EMBASSY

A reporter was informed on reliable authority last night that the name of the foreign Embassy in London, written down by McMahon in court, was that of the German Embassy.

When the report was referred to an authoritative quarter last night the only comment was: "Does anyone really take this seriously?"

The Attorney-General, in his cross-examination of McMahon on this point, said: "Inquiries were made on the purported information you gave in April, and the authorities were satisfied there was nothing whatever in your story."

The Gordon Dance Hall, Paisley road, Glasgow, was the scene of a wild disturbance late on Saturday night, as a result of which three persons were taken to the infirmary suffering from wounds. The injured persons were:—John Turnbull, Black street; George Muir, Maclean street; and William Campbell, Plantation street. There was great disorder near the hall, and the police were summoned.

PRISONER'S DEATH IN ARBOUR HILL

FINDING OF THE BODY

LETTERS FOUND IN CELL

EVIDENCE AT THE INQUEST

BRUISES found on the body, and regulations at Arbour Hill Detention Prison, were the subject of questions in the course of the examination of witnesses at the inquest which opened in St. Bricin's Military Hospital yesterday, on the body of Sean Glynn (25), of 69 Peunywell road, Limerick.

The inquest proceedings, which occupied four hours, were adjourned until 11 a.m. on Friday.

The deceased man had been a prisoner in Arbour Hill since July 10th, and was serving a term of nine months' imprisonment, imposed by the Military Tribunal, on a charge of membership of an unlawful association. He was found dead in his cell on Sunday.

The large room in the hospital where the inquest was presided over by Dr. D. A. McErlean, City Coroner, was crowded with relatives and friends of the deceased prisoner.

During the proceedings there were exchanges between Captain Duffy, Governor of Arbour Hill Prison and Mr. A. Lynn, who, instructed by Messrs. Lehane and Hogan, appeared for the next-of-kin.

Mr. J. Geoghegan, K.C., with Mr. J. A. Geary (Chief State Solicitor's Office) appeared for the Governor of the prison.

FATHER'S EVIDENCE

The first witness, Mr. John Glynn, father of the deceased man, identified the remains.

In reply to Mr. Lynn, the witness said that he had some difficulty at first in recognising the remains, the orderlies having put a cap on the head, which disguised him. His face was very much changed. The deceased boy always had been in good health, and never had shown any sign of insanity, nor had he ever threatened to take his life. He never had received any information or intimation from the authorities at Arbour Hill Prison or Mountjoy about the physical or mental state of his son. There was no history of insanity in either his own or his wife's family.

Cross-examined by Mr. Geoghegan, the witness said that his son, Joseph, had interviewed the deceased man on September 6 in Arbour Hill.

Captain Buckley, Medical Officer, said that when he went to the barracks in response to a message at 12.45 p.m. on Sunday last he found life extinct. He performed a post-mortem examination on the body, and found externally that there was a curved contusion and superficial abrasion of the skin on the neck, on the left side, about three inches long, half-way between the lower jaw and the collar-bone. Face, ears, nails and hands were livid, but there was no other evidence of violence. Death, in his opinion, was due to cardiac failure following asphyxia, caused by constriction of the neck.

QUESTION OF BRUISES

Mr. Lynn—Did you find any bruises on the back?—No.

If our medical man swears that he found two bruises on the back, would you contradict him?—Yes.

In further reply to Mr. Lynn, the witness said that he found post-mortem signs, but not ante-mortem marks.

Mr. Lynn—How do you differentiate between marks caused post-mortem and those caused ante-mortem?—I saw the body before the post-mortem was held and saw no stains. I saw them after the post-mortem.

When there is chromatic interference with a body after death the mark thus produced has certain characteristics, signs quite different from signs which are produced when there is interference before death. In this particular case are you able to say definitely that the marks discovered on the back were made post-mortem?—Well, I saw the body about one o'clock on Sunday, and there were no marks on the back. At the time of the post-mortem I found post-mortem stains.

There are other factors which have to be taken into account when you want to discover whether certain injuries are post or ante-mortem. Have you got any other of these factors to adduce in support of your theory, according to which the injuries were purely post-mortem?—What I saw was a stain of the skin at the post-mortem.

Did you discover anything in the nature of two distinct bruises?—No.

If our medical adviser who has seen the body tells us that there are two distinct bruises on the back, will you contradict him?—Yes.

Mr. Lynn at this stage suggested that Captain Buckley and Dr. Cronin visit the body together and inspect the marks on the back.

This was agreed to by the Coroner.

TOWEL AROUND NECK

Corporal O'Toole, Arbour Hill, said that he took up duty at 7 a.m. on Sunday last in the prison, where the deceased man was under his charge. Glynn was called for 7 o'clock Mass, and after Mass he went back to his cell, and had his breakfast at about 7.30. Witness saw him occasionally after that, and at one time during the day, when medicinal supplies were being given to the deceased man, witness asked him if Sean Glynn was his name, and Glynn replied, "You know." Glynn never made any complaint to him about his health. At about 12.10 p.m. Glynn was sitting on his bed, reading a book. At about 12.40 witness brought Glynn's dinner. He opened the door of the cell and said, "Your dinner," but there was no reply. Witness looked in, and thought Glynn was sitting against the wall. Thinking he was sick, he ran over to him, and it was then he noticed a towel around his neck. There were two towels tied together, one end looped around his neck, and the other end was tied around the support of a shelf above his head. One foot was resting on a stool, and the other was on the ground. Witness could not open the knot on the towels, and he called Corporal Teehan and the medical orderly. With their assistance the towel was cut, and the prisoner was laid face down on the bed. They tried artificial respiration, but without result.

CROSS-EXAMINED

Mr. Lynn—Have any prisoners been removed from Arbour Hill insane?—Not that I know.

Do you know of any prisoner being taken screaming from his cell at night?—No, not to my knowledge.

If Mr. Donal O'Donoghue, editor of An Phoblacht, who was a prisoner in Arbour Hill, swears to that, will you say he is telling lies?—I don't know anything about it.

Were you very much astonished to find the prisoner in the cell in that position?—Yes.

Did he go to Mass and Communion that morning?—Yes.

In what condition did he go: was he handcuffed and between two guards?—No.

Did he go up to the altar quite freely?—He did; yes.

Is it not true that your chaplain has complained about the fact that the prisoners cannot go to the altar unattended by guards? That is not true.

How did he go to Mass?—With the usual escort.

Would you pledge your oath he did not go to the altar with guards accompanying him?—Yes, they did.

They accompanied him right up to the altar?—No, only to the seat.

When he returned from the altar were the guards waiting on him?—I don't know; I was not there.

So that you don't really know anything about what you are telling us?—That is the general way. When he returned he was under a guard.

NOT ALLOWED TO SPEAK

Witness added, in further reply, that he did not speak to the prisoner during the day; he was not permitted to speak to a prisoner unless on a point of duty. Witness was in Arbour Hill about two months, and during that time the deceased man was not permitted to speak to anyone else. He could only speak to the medical officer or the Section Commander on a point of duty. He was not in Arbour Hill when any prisoners were removed, but he remembered Mr. O'Donoghue being removed after hunger strike.

Mr. Lynn—If Mr. O'Donoghue swears that a prisoner was taken from his cell at night screaming will you deny that it ever happened?—It never happened; not to my knowledge.

Mr. Lynn at this stage produced a copy of the Saorstat Eireann Statutory Rules and Orders, 1936, No. 206, consolidated regulations made under Article 2 A of the Constitution—regulations made, observed Mr. Lynn, by Mr. Frank Aiken.

Asked if the rules had been given to him, witness said that no officer had brought him the regulations and he had not seen them. Before he went to Arbour Hill he had been at Government Buildings for eleven years.

Corporal Teehan corroborated the evidence of the last witness in relation to the finding of Glynn's body. He never knew, he said, of any prisoner being beaten in the prison.

Mr. Lynn—You did not personally take part in a beating of prisoners in November, 1935—No.

REGULATIONS

Asked if he had seen the prison regulations, the witness said that he had, and added that there probably was a copy of them in the court. The regulations he had seen were not the same as those that had been produced by Mr. Lynn.

Mr. Geoghegan mentioned that the two documents were the same—one simply being a summary of the other.

At this stage the evidence of Captain Buckley was resumed, following an inspection of the body. He said that he saw the two marks on the back, which, in his opinion were caused by movement on the post-mortem table. He could not differentiate between marks that were produced post-mortem and ante-mortem. To determine definitely it would be necessary to have a microscopic examination by an expert.

Mr. Lynn—So that in the absence of that examination it is impossible for any medical officer in the world to pronounce definitely whether the marks were post or ante-mortem?—Yes. I did not see these marks when I saw the man on Sunday.

Had you seen them until I requested the Coroner to direct your attention to the remains a short time ago?—No.

So you had not seen them when you conducted the post-mortem?—No; the man was lying on his back.

And you stated positively after the post-mortem that they did not exist?—Yes.

When you are conducting a post-mortem is it not somewhat indiscreet to rely on what appears to be the obvious cause of death?—It would.

When you were conducting the post-mortem, I suggest to you it would have been at least prudent to have examined the back?—Which I did.

And you did not discover the two bruises?—No.

BRUISES

Where were the bruises?—On the lower part of the back, at the end of the ribs, about an inch from the spinal column on each side, and on the same level.

Will you not agree that that is the one spot where it is impossible for a dead body to produce marks through lying on any table or slab?—No, I would not agree. A certain amount of movement has to be carried out when performing a post-mortem. The part where the marks were protruded.

Does not that show there was a swelling there before death?—There was no swelling.

How can there be a protrusion from this part of the body unless there was swelling? There was no disease of the kidneys, and there could be no protrusion in the absence of a beating before death?—It is my opinion that the body was touching the table.

Replying to Mr. Geoghegan the witness said that he had his M.B. and B.Ch. from National University, and was a qualified medical man for fifteen years. There were no marks of violence on Glynn's body.

Dr. J. Cronin, M.B., B.Ch., B.A.O., examined by Mr. Lynn on behalf of the next-of-kin, said that he examined the body and found two bruises on the back, but in the absence of a microscopic examination it was not possible to say whether they were caused post or ante-mortem. They might have been caused by post-mortem strains, but he could not say.

Corporal Ryan and Private Oliver corroborated the evidence given by Corporal Teehan.

Captain T. Duffy stated that he had been Governor of Arbour Hill Detention Barracks off and on for four or five years. During the present period he had been in the position from 20th April. Glynn was committed on 10th July. He saw Glynn after his admittance and spoke to him, and he had seen and spoken to him on different occasions since. When he received a message about him on Sunday he immediately telephoned for the Medical Officer and Chaplain.

ELIGIBLE FOR RELEASE

The deceased man, according to the terms of the sentence, became eligible that day (Monday) for release on entering into recognizances to be of good behaviour. On Tuesday last he visited Glynn and asked him if he would be prepared to enter into recognizances. The prisoner said he was not.

Mr. Geoghegan here handed the witness a document and asked him to identify the handwriting.

Captain Duffy said that, in his opinion, it was the handwriting of Sean Glynn, and he had received it at 11 a.m. that day from Quartermaster-Captain Daly.

Mr. Geoghegan read the document as follows:—"Dear Mother,—Just a line to say goodbye. I feel I cannot stand this any longer. I have been subject to cruel treatment since I was arrested coming to Dublin. The Guards passed all kinds of remarks, and said I was suffering from terrible disease and I would rot in a month. There were five of them on the right in the 'bus—Dalton, Buckley—he was in Ardnacrusha one time; he is now stationed in Wilham street—he was the worst. He reaped up sins of my brother. There were three others—Cuddy and Feury and another sandy-haired fellow, I don't know his name, but he is usually with Buckley. All this was organised by McKaul. I was in the barracks at Limerick and all the John street Guards were there, and any of them did not know me. I was searched by O'Donoghue, the fellow that beat me in O'Connell street with McKaul, and he passed me on to McNulty, and said I had nothing on me when I had money. . . ."

A SECOND LETTER

A second letter, also identified as the handwriting of Glynn, was read by Mr. Geoghegan:—"Dear Mother,—I received your letter on Thursday. I was glad to hear from you. I also had one from May yesterday. Well, I must tell you the truth. Since I was arrested I have been subject to all kinds of threats, in William street barracks and since I came here. The warders have used all kinds of dirty remarks towards me and I am about fed up. I have done everything wrong since I came. I should not have taken a visit last week. When first I was arrested, when we arrived I was searched four times, three by Guard O'Donoghue and once by Detective-Officer McNulty, and I then had money in my pockets. When we were being removed to Dublin on our journey I was he. . . ."

Mr. Geoghegan—The last word may have been beaten, but I don't think it is. The remainder of the letter is indecipherable.

Mr. Lynn—It could not be beaten—the word is too long; it may have been blackguarded.

Mr. Geoghegan produced another document—the cover of a writing pad with one leaf attached, the writing on which was identified as that of Glynn.

Mr. Geoghegan informed the inquiry that the pad cover bore the sentences:—I noticed that the towels are of a different pattern. On 2nd September I noticed that I had two odd towels. On the leaf there was a drawing with the word "Government" over it, and the word "Municipal" and the letters "C.R."

In reply to Mr. Lynn, witness said that he had received a copy of the prison regulations referred to previously, and he had seen three or four different paragraphs referring to the steps to be taken when a prisoner was discovered showing signs of incipient insanity.

Mr. Lynn asked had it not struck him that the person who framed those regulations had in mind, when doing so, that the condition of imprisonment at Arbour Hill were such as would likely cause a prisoner to show signs of insanity.

The witness said that it was not for him to interpret what was in the minds of the persons who drafted the regulations.

FIFTY-SEVEN PRISONERS

In further reply to Mr. Lynn, the witness said that there were at present fifty-seven prisoners in Arbour Hill. It was at present the practice to keep all the prisoners separated.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

A GOLDEN JUBILEE

The Times in a leading article to-day says:—An Empire Exhibition in which all the nations of the British Commonwealth are participating with displays of their characteristic products and activities will be opened in Johannesburg to-day to mark the Golden Jubilee of a city which, young in years, is already famous throughout the world. It was a happy idea to choose this form of celebration, giving many thousands of overseas visitors an insight into the resources and characteristics of South Africa, and enabling South Africans to learn something of the products and achievements of Great Britain and of the other Dominions.

Tradition decrees, proceeds The Times, that any celebration which marks the successful conclusion of fifty years' existence shall be a Golden Jubilee, but the name is peculiarly appropriate to the present celebrant. Of the Johannesburg Exhibition, it can be sincerely said that its pomps and its wonders are—what is by no means always the case—phenomena perfectly in keeping with the economic conditions of the place and the period. Here is no brave, but rather desperate, bluff, no last bid to attract prestige and wealth. This Jubilee is a logical as well as a chronological occurrence. On the uplands, where the first wagons outspanned a short half-century ago, fish from the bottom of the sea have arrived by air to exhibit their peculiarities to the curious. Where a full billycan was once a precious thing, a skating rink has been constructed, the first of its kind in Africa. The value of the exhibition is calculated at £2,000,000; 3,000,000 visitors are expected. The whole Union has sunk its political differences and given the enterprise generous support, and the F.B.I. has played a leading part in the plans and organisation. Few countries are experiencing a boom just now, and, perhaps, the world at large may take courage from the spectacle of so striking a manifestation of prosperity in South Africa.

Mr. Lynn—Did you ever hear of a prisoner being removed from Arbour Hill insane?—I do not know of any.

To St. John of God's, for instance?—No; I remember a man being removed to St. Bricin's for observation.

You never heard of a prisoner being removed to Cork—you never heard of Christopher Aherne?—Yes, I did. He was removed to St. Bricin's for observation, and after that was discharged.

Witness added that he had seen the prisoner every third day since he had come to Arbour Hill, and that neither he nor the medical officer suspected that there was anything wrong with him.

Mr. Lynn—Did you never think that the conditions in Arbour Hill were likely to produce insanity?—I am a soldier, sir.

Mr. Lynn—If you are a soldier why are you a gaoler? Is it a soldier's duty to be the gaoler of his fellow-countrymen in Arbour Hill?

Witness—It is a soldier's duty to serve his country. I served my country during the British time, which, maybe, you did not.

Mr. Lynn—My record is as good as yours.

The Coroner—I am conducting this inquiry and it will have to be done in an orderly manner.

Mr. Lynn—He started it; I did not. It should not have been introduced. I have heard a whole lot about the record of these people, but I did not see them doing anything myself.

Proceeding, Mr. Lynn asked witness if he ever heard about Christopher Aherne being in the River Lee.

Witness—I saw something about it in the papers.

Mr. Lynn—Is every person in Arbour Hill normal at present?—Yes.

Even when Donal O'Donoghue was on hunger strike?

Witness replied that he did not know whether a person going on hunger strike would be called normal.

SAW NOTHING ABNORMAL

Captain G. Davis, medical officer, said that he examined Sean Glynn and saw nothing abnormal.

In reply to Mr. Lynn, witness said that when Glynn was sent to Arbour Hill there was no medical report from Mountjoy Prison, where he had been detained prior to his conviction. He visited Glynn four times between July 21 and August 11.

Captain G. Davis, medical officer, said Hospital, said that he examined Mr. Glynn on his admission to the prison on July 17, and he was then in normal health, and showed no signs of mental instability.

Mr. Lynn asked if people were kept in solitary confinement for several months would it not tend towards insanity in some of them.

The witness said that a person highly strung might become neurotic, but every person would show a different reaction.

Captain Michael O'Hanlon, Medical Officer, gave evidence of having seen the prisoner last Saturday. He saw no evidence of mental weakness. On examining the prisoner he found that he had a cist on his body. The prisoner said that he thought that the cist had something to do with a serious disease, and said that the Guards had told him that he had this disease. Witness ass

WELSH ROTARIANS IN DUBLIN

THREE LANGUAGES AT MEETING

Three languages—English, Welsh and Irish—were used when 33 members of the Swansea and Carmarthen Rotary Clubs attended the weekly luncheon of the Dublin Rotary Club in the Metropole Restaurant.

Mr. Reginald Keatinge, President of the Dublin Club, in introducing the visitors, said that they formed a wonderful delegation, including the Director of the R.I.B.I., two Club Presidents, past Presidents, a Vice-President, two hon. secretaries and members. When the visitors were introduced, according to Rotary custom, they were given a cordial reception by the Dublin members present.

Mr. Keatinge went on to say that this visit of Welsh Rotarians was very gratifying. That day their visitors would realise that they were in the Irish Free State, and he hoped they would look for these words on their bacon and eggs in the future. He would also like the letters "I.F.S." to be taken as standing for the "Irish Friendly State."

Mr. Ted Fletcher, President of Swansea Rotary Club, responding, congratulated Rotarians and the citizens of Dublin on their beautiful city, and on the way in which new houses and roads were being constructed. Mr. Keatinge had shown them some of the outlying parts of the city, and development was taking place there on the right lines. He extended a cordial invitation to Dublin Rotarians to visit Wales. On behalf of the Swansea and Carmarthen Clubs he presented a miniature Welsh flag to the Dublin Club as a memento of the occasion.

Mr. R. A. Holden, President of the Carmarthen Club, also returned thanks for the hospitality shown them.

Mr. T. J. Rees, Director, R.I.B.I., speaking in Welsh and afterwards in English, said that an examination of the Book of Kells had shown the visitors that Ireland had had a very early civilisation. Referring to the wonderful housing schemes and playing fields in Dublin, he hoped that the Rotary Club gave its support to the main objects of the municipality. They should not consider the question of cost in regard to anything which provided for the health, well-being and happiness of the citizens. It was not walls, but men that made a city, and it was good to see a body like Rotary operating at a time when they had Trades' Unions working to keep up wages, and federations of employers aiming to keep up profits.

Mr. Fred. Summerfield, Hon. Secretary, Dublin Club, speaking in Irish and afterwards English, said that Ireland had a distinctive language which was very much alive. He hoped that this visit was just the beginning of many.

Among the Welsh visitors were:—Swansea—Messrs. T. J. Rees, Director, R.I.B.I.; E. Fletcher, President; D. Hicks Morgan, immediate Past President; G. A. Seyler, Past President; T. J. S. Morgan, Hon. Secretary; A. Mackrill, B. T. Rees, Norman Clark, W. G. Williams, T. G. Lawrence, A. Newton Jenkins, John Roberts, J. Austin Bailey, Thomas Batcup, H. G. Hart, Wm. Maclean, Ernest Jones, H. F. Strawford, A. G. Thompson, G. E. Hider, T. D. Williams.

Carmarthen—R. A. Holden, President; Whitlock Williams, Vice-President; W. H. Thomas, Thomas Lloyd, A. H. Stoodley, E. A. Heddon, D. F. Lowndes.

Also present—Rotarian A. R. Lester, Cork; non-Rotarians F. S. Velton, W. L. Foster, and G. D. Hanna.

LAOIGHIS MEN'S ASSOCIATION

At a general meeting of Cumann Muinntire Laoighis (Laoighis Men's Association), in Winn's Hotel, the following officers for the coming year were elected unanimously:—President, Mr. D. Dunne; Vice-President, Mr. Wm. Davin, T.D.; Honorary Secretaries, Messrs. E. Fleming and P. L. McEvoy; Honorary Treasurers, Messrs. P. J. Fleming and W. P. Kealy. On a ballot vote the following were elected to eleven vacancies on the Committee:—Mrs. Guiry, Miss K. Dunphy, Messrs. Ml. Brennan, T. Duggan, John Fitzgerald, John Fleming, D. McGowan, T. O'Byrne, E. Phelan, A. Whelan, D. Whelan.

A report from the Sub-Committee which is arranging for the reception of the Laoighis All-Ireland football finalists in Dublin on 27th inst. was presented. The reception will be held in Winn's Hotel, supper being served at 8.30 p.m. Tickets for practically all the accommodation available were distributed at the general meeting, but a small number was reserved for Laoighis people not present.

"QUITE FOREIGN AND SINISTER"

JOURNALISTS AND THE B.B.C.

The Institute of Journalists, at their national conference in Edinburgh, yesterday, carried unanimously a resolution: "Viewing with apprehension the course which the relationship of the B.B.C. to professional journalism is taking, and calling on the Council of the Institute to take all steps necessary to safeguard the profession from the encroachments of broadcasting, and to protect members of the Institute from any actions on the part of the B.B.C. which might menace their livelihood."

The resolution was submitted by the London district.

Moving the resolution, Mr. Harold Ffoulkes, of London, stated that it had resulted from "profoundly disquieting information which had come from usually reliable sources." They felt conscious of the fact that these rumours were of a serious character, and it was better that any agitation in this matter should be ventilated rather than left to ferment. Their charge against the B.B.C., if the allegations were trustworthy, was that, not satisfied with the monopoly conferred upon them by Parliament, the B.B.C. was seeking to employ something suspiciously like intimidation in order that its monopoly might be extended to the printed word. It was something quite foreign and sinister.

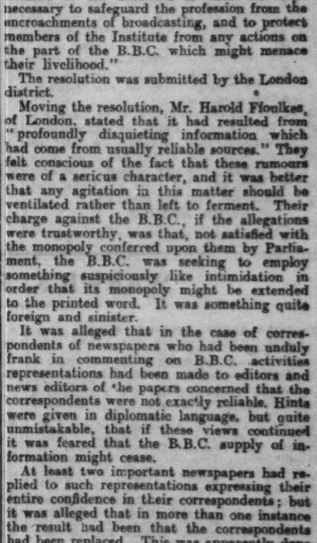
It was alleged that in the case of correspondents of newspapers who had been unduly frank in commenting on B.B.C. activities representations had been made to editors and news editors of the papers concerned that the correspondents were not exactly reliable. Hints were given in diplomatic language, but quite unmistakable, that if these views continued it was feared that the B.B.C. supply of information might cease.

At least two important newspapers had replied to such representations expressing their entire confidence in their correspondents; but it was alleged that in more than one instance the result had been that the correspondents had been replaced. This was apparently done with a view to ensuring as great a degree of immunity from criticism as possible for the B.B.C.

"We want no dictatorship right, left or middle," he declared. The B.B.C. should repudiate an attempt so unworthy of a great corporation.

Mr. Ffoulkes referred to the fact that they were unable to obtain information of the salaries paid for journalistic work by the B.B.C. It had been suggested that in some cases the salaries were below the scales recognised. He advocated that members of Parliament be asked to press for a record of such salaries.

On the motion of Mr. Frederick Peaker, of London, the conference adopted a resolution welcoming the promise of the British Government to enter into negotiations with the foreign Governments concerned with a view to stopping the broadcasting of advertisements in English intended for English listeners.



GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

THE BIG HANDICAPS

A Strong French Challenge for the Cesarewitch

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

WARWICK, Monday Night.

WE shall soon be on the flood-tide of betting on the Cesarewitch and the Cambridgeshire, for the acceptances were published last week. It is not a particularly timely effort to circulate these just when the Doncaster meeting is busiest, but that is the way of authority.

I believe there has been a considerable amount of betting on both races already, and there seems scope for a great deal more, which there will be as the punters' temperature is high just now, even in spite of Doncaster.

If anyone could get a "fair" price about a French-bred horse winning the Cesarewitch he might be well advised to take it, for between those that are already trained in England and those trained in France there seems to be a fairly formidable contingent, headed by Bokbul and Mansur.

For Jockey Club Cup

Bokbul, who was third in the Ascot Gold Cup to Quashed and Omaha, has also been entered for the Jockey Club Cup, where the names of Lord Stanley's filly and the American colt reappear.

I am sure the French people, with the wealth of good stayers they have to choose from, will be making a dead-set at the race again, for they had no great regard for Night Cap III. last October, and yet he was only narrowly and unluckily run out of it by Near Relation. Nightcap III. has 8st. 7lb. this year, but he has not run since last October.

I saw one trained by Lawson, Kanuck, run very well at Doncaster last week, although he was unplaced in the Rufford Abbey behind Newtown Ford, Avondale, and Fonds de Caisse. He is no better handicapped with them at Newmarket—in fact, he is 5lb. worse in with the winner. But I shall have to find good reason for changing my ideas before accepting Newtown Ford as a Cesarewitch horse with a 7st. lad on him.

Seemed Outpaced

Perhaps Manton will have a better three-year-old than Kanuck in Sir Abe Bailey's Foxfield—7st. 7lb.—but he seemed outpaced in the St. Leger. He ran much better in the Grand Prix de Paris.

The four-year-old Plunger is another from this stable, but he was well beaten in the Prince Edward Handicap at Manchester.

I believe that a four-year old filly trained in France, Primrose, has been backed. She has already run here in the colours of Mr. A. K. Macomber, but not noticeably well.

Mr. Macomber, by the way, is another of the owners racing in France, who is understood to be transferring nearly all his horses to England. There is no improvement in the racing situation in France, and no one foresees any in the early future.

I should not be surprised to see Patrimony in the betting, for this is a very useful horse, but he is by Diophon, which does not suggest stamina. If I had to bet now I would as soon take Avondale as anything and trust to the ground being as soft as she likes it on the day.

I daresay some people who saw Finalist run such a good race at Doncaster on Friday made up their minds that he will be their Cambridgeshire horse and will fix a stony stare on some of those that will be thrusting their claims on us during the next few weeks. And they may be right in their generation.

He is a very good four-year-old and was manifestly unlucky in the race last year. If he keeps his form and continues to do well it is more than likely that I will be suggesting him in the week of the race as one of a small group that may include the winner.

Running into Form

Law Court, who was so much fancied last year, I will not have. Dan Bulger, I think, may develop into a fancied candidate. He has already been backed for the race and appears to be at last running into form.

There are some useful three-year-olds entered from France like Ambrose Light, third in the French Two Thousand Guineas, and Tempest, but the chances of both the French and the English three-year-olds will be better revealed by their running both this and next month. Our own assortment of three-year-olds in the race hardly seems as good as usual.

An early double based on Doncaster running is Avondale and Finalist. Odd if Mr. Macomber, who has brought off the double—with Forseti and Masked Marvel—should do it again with Primrose and Tempest II.!

At Warwick

There was no very bright feature in the racing on the Lammas lands here this afternoon, when fancied horses did not do over well until Stratton Street won the fifth race, the Stoneleigh Plate, for Mrs. Arthur James, who lives near the course at Coton House, and generally has a winner at the meeting.

One trained by Fred Winter, Treadwell, won the most interesting event of the afternoon, the Wellesbourne Nursery, in which there were two better favourites, Lady of the Lamp and Ram Along. Neither of these could finish in the first three, and Treadwell was a clever head winner from Miss Paget's Ethland and the Element colt.

Selections

The racing will be continued here this afternoon, where the Little Breeders' Two-year-old Plate should be won by ARISTIDES.

The Emscote Plate may go to THE REEVE, and the Meriden Plate to PINK BOY.

GALTEE MORE.

FINE INNINGS BY L. P. JAI

INDIAN TOURING TEAM ON TOP

Only three of India's batsmen accomplished anything noteworthy in the opening of the two-days' fixtures with the Indian Gymkhana at Osterley Park yesterday. They were Jai, Mushtaq Ali and Palia, who between them scored 203 of India's total of 303. When Jai went in second wicket down the wicket was assisting the spin bowlers, as it dried after a heavy dew. F. C. de Sarem bowled particularly well at this time, and took his first three wickets for 23 runs.

Jai, who had some luck during an innings lasting two hours and three-quarters, completed a century before the last two wickets fell at the same total. He scored mainly on the leg side, and made some good hooks and pulls, hitting eight fours. Four sixes were registered during the innings, two of them by Mushtaq Ali, who scored 48 in an hour. Palia, who added 99 with Jai in a sixth wicket partnership lasting an hour, played, perhaps, his best innings of the tour. Score:—

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

FOOTBALL LEAGUE TEAM FOR BELFAST

The Football League meeting in Manchester yesterday chose the following eleven to play the Irish League at Windsor Park, Belfast, on Wednesday, September 23:—

Goal—Sagar (Everton);

Full-backs—Rochford (Portsmouth), Shaw (Wolverhampton Wanderers);

Half-backs—Willingham (Huddersfield T.), Barker (Derby County) (capt.), Bray (Manchester City);

Forwards—Birkett (Middlesbrough), Carter (Sunderland), Steele (Stoke City), Westwood (Bolton Wanderers), and Brook (Manchester City).

Reserves to travel: Welsh (Charlton Athletic) and Cunliffe (Everton).

Referee—S. Thompson (Belfast).

With the Arsenal engaged the same day in a friendly match against Glasgow Rangers at Highbury, none of their players were considered. Two new full-backs, in Rochford of Portsmouth and Shaw (C.) of Wolverhampton, should form a steady defence, with Sagar of Everton, but more important is the choice of Steele, the Stoke City centre-forward. He leapt into prominence last season, and providing he steers clear of injuries he should have a great future.

DUBLIN CITY XI. TO MEET LEEDS

The Selection Committee of the Free State League have selected the following team to represent Dublin City against Leeds United at Dalymount Park on Monday next:—

Goal—Pinkerton (Dolphin).

Full-backs—Collins (Dolphin), J. Doyle (Bohemians).

Half-backs—O'Reilly (St. James's Gate) (captain), Watt (Dolphin), F. Hutchinson (Drumcondra).

Forwards—Donnelly (Drumcondra), S. Moore (Bohemians), Moore (P.) (Shamrock Rovers), Graham (Shelbourne), Geoghegan (St. James's Gate).

Reserve—Hoy (Bray Unknowns).

THE U.S.A. AMATEUR TITLE

PROMISING START BY HECTOR THOMSON

NEW YORK, Monday.

Hector Thomson (Williamwood), the British amateur champion, gained an encouraging 7 and 6 win over J. W. Roberts (Colombus, Ohio) in the first round of the American Amateur Championship at Garden City, Long Island, to-day. Thomson was in devastating form, and, taking 36 to the turn, was 7 up. He had par figures at every hole except the sixth, where he had a "birdie" 3, his chip shot from 25 feet dropping into the hole. Coming home Thomson dropped a shot at each of the first three holes, taking three putts at the tenth to lose the hole, but he won the eleventh and twelfth for the match. For the twelve holes played Thomson took fifty strokes.

H. G. Bentley (Hesketh), the English champion, lost by one hole to Walter Blevins (Kansas City)—a substitute for G. Duval—after being 3 up with four to play. Blevins's substitution was in accordance with the U.S. Golf Association's usual practice. Duval scratched, and Blevins, first reserve for his section, was given the place. A certain number of reserves are always selected for this event to take the place of scratchings.

J. D. A. Langley (Northwood), last year's British boy champion, won 3 and 2 against Eugene Pittman (Maryland), but Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Boyd (Portmarnock), former Irish and Army champion, lost by one hole to Harry Haverstick, a seventeen years old Pennsylvania schoolboy. Colonel Boyd is in America with the British seniors team.

The entire British Walker Cup team—who recently lost against the United States in the biennial contest at Pine Valley—were engaged, but first round byes had been drawn by Alec Hill (Sandy Lodge), J. Morton Dukes (Western Gailes), G. B. Peters (Feteneze), C. Ewing (County Sligo), and the captain, Dr. William Tweddell (Stourbridge).

FIRST ROUND.

Hector Thomson (Williamwood) beat J. W. Roberts (Colombus, Ohio)—7 and 6.
W. Blevins (Kansas City) beat H. G. Bentley (Hesketh)—1 hole.
J. D. A. Langley (Northwood) beat E. Pittman (Maryland)—3 and 2.
H. Haverstick, jr. (Will Street, Pennsylvania) beat Lieut.-Colonel H. A. Boyd (Portmarnock)—1 hole.
F. Wright, jr. (Waltham, Mass.) beat A. R. Aitken (Prestwick)—3 and 2.
P. B. Lucas (Sandy Lodge) beat Hal Chase (Desmoines)—4 and 2.
Jack McLean (Hayston) beat Robert Lowe (Clarksburg, West Virginia)—3 and 2.
H. C. Longhurst (Addington) beat Kenneth Corcoran (Osterville)—5 and 4.
W. B. McCullagh, jun. (Pine Valley) beat T. A. Torrance (Royal and Ancient)—4 and 2.

The L. F. Rowlandson cup, which was presented some years ago by Mr. Rowlandson, superintendent of staff and organisation, is played for annually at Southport, the preliminary match play rounds being settled in the various areas over the L.M. and S. system. McClelland Martin, of Belfast, won the cup last year, the first time he entered. On Saturday last the final was played over the Hillside course, but Martin was unable to retain his trophy. It was won by T. E. Hawkins, Liverpool, who, playing off a handicap of 10, returned over 36 holes nett scores of 74 and 70. The staff in the Free State was represented in the final by J. M. Irwin (Irish Traffic Manager), F. E. Jones and W. J. Murphy (Greenore).

WRESTLING

O'MAHONY HELD TO A DRAW

GOOD SHOW BY STRACK AT DALYMOUNT

Dan O'Mahony retained his title of world's champion by drawing with Charlie Strack (U.S.A.) at Dalymount Park last night, before an attendance of approximately 10,000. It was a rather disappointing bout, for O'Mahony failed to produce his famous "Irish whip," and apart from that seemed rather fortunate to draw against a very tough opponent.

The first round was rather in favour of O'Mahony, who for a time had Strack in trouble with a leg lock, from which, however, the American succeeded in getting clear. O'Mahony went out of the ring for a short count, but got in to take the honours of the round.

In the second, Strack made a splendid recovery after it had seemed a certainty that he would be pinned down. Up to this stage it was a terrific struggle between two very earnest men. The third round was featured by an amount of close work "on the carpet," and was again in favour of O'Mahony, who had Strack in difficulties with a toe hold which promised well for the champion, but the bell came in time to save Strack.

The fourth was all in favour of O'Mahony, who twice had his man in trouble with leg locks, but each time the champion was unable to administer the finishing touch. In a rather tame fifth round the only feature was a leg lock which Strack got in, only to lose the advantage on the bell. In the sixth O'Mahony, with an "aeroplane spin," almost had his man out of the ring, but Strack recovered from a tight corner, and the round finished even.

A STRONG FINISH

The eighth round was definitely in favour of Strack, who on several occasions had O'Mahony almost pinned, and it was only the superb strength of the Irishman that enabled him to get out of a series of difficult positions.

In the final round both men indulged in a bout of somewhat harmless fisticuffs prior to getting down to the more serious business. O'Mahony was palpably tiring, and Strack had the better of what was in it without being able to pin the Irishman down.

SUPPORTING BOUTS

As a curtain-raiser Rube Wright (U.S.A.) met Frank Armstrong (London) over ten five-minute rounds. It was an entertaining bout, chiefly due to incessant vocal outbursts by Armstrong, who seemed to have a definite objection, which he was never slow to voice, against any and every hold employed by Wright.

As a display of acting it was superb; as an exhibition of wrestling it was entertaining; as a serious contest it was just amusing. The referee adjudged Wright to have won in the sixth round by "a headlock and fall," and there was none to dispute the verdict.

The bout between Steve Casey (Kerry) and Al de Metrie (London) was a more lively affair. After a rather even first round Casey put his man on the boards with a "Flying Mare" in the second. In the third round each man was down in turn for a short count. It was quite a good bout, in which the referee's decision of a win for Casey in the third round was a popular one.

BOXING

McAVOY'S QUICK WIN

Jock McAvoy (Rochdale), British middleweight champion, beat Albert Barjolin (France) in the second round of a twelve rounds contest at Bellevue, Manchester, last night, the Frenchman retiring. The fight lasted 5 minutes 56 seconds. It was found that a terrific right to Barjolin's face had smashed a tooth into the jaw. He was immediately seen by a doctor, who stated that the Frenchman had previously had his jaw broken, and there was a possibility of fracture in the present case.

After an opening round, in which Barjolin showed little resistance to McAvoy's forcing tactics, the British champion launched a heavy onslaught in the second round. A storm of blows to head and body fell upon Barjolin, who was almost sent down, and immediately afterwards intimated his retirement.

WELSH TITLE FOR FARR

Tommy Farr (Clydach Vale) knocked out Jim Wilde (Swansea), the holder, in the 7th round of a 15 rounds contest for the Welsh heavy-weight championship at Swansea football ground last night.

IRISH CHRISTIAN FRONT

LORD FFRENCH REPLIES TO CRITICS

A branch of the Irish Christian Front was formed at Fairview, Dublin, last night, on the unanimous resolution of the members of a mass meeting.

Lord ffrench, supporting the resolution, which was proposed by Mr. Desmond Bell, said that it was necessary to clear up certain false ideas which had been spread in regard to what was happening in Spain and concerning Communism generally.

They were told that there were no outrages to speak of in Spain; that it was a fight between a democratic Government and people who were attempting to establish Fascism. Every perversion of the truth that could be though of had been put forward.

The Government which had been elected in Spain had not obtained the support of one half of the Spanish people, he said. Moreover, when it was elected it had no mandate for the burning of the churches of Spain and the killing and torturing of bishops, priests and nuns, nor had it a mandate to commit most horrible sacrilege. But they were told that those things occurred only after the Army had revolted. That was a lie. Anyone who cared to look through the files of the London Times would find accounts of the burning of many churches and the killing of priests even before the Army had revolted.

They had been told that the defeat of the "Reds" in Spain would mean the establishment of the Fascist Government; and the Irish Christian Front was accused of supporting Fascism. That was absolutely untrue. The Fascism of which they had examples in Europe to-day were also based on the forces of terror.

Mr. P. Belton, T.D., who presided, said that the attitude of the Irish Christian Front had been justified by the Pope's broadcast.

JOHANNESBURG'S "WEMBLEY"

Dublin Woman's Death.—A verdict of death from heart failure, accelerated through accidentally falling downstairs, was returned by the jury at an inquest held in Bangor yesterday into the circumstances of the death of Mrs. Annie Seyers (72), of Moyne road, Dublin. She was on a holiday for the past month with her brother-in-law, Mr. W. C. Seyers, J.P., at Abbey street, Bangor, and on Sunday morning was found in a dying condition at the foot of the stairs. FLOUR-MILLING DISPUTE

RESULT OF BALLOT EXPECTED TO-DAY

A ballot vote on the flour-milling offer was taken last night at 192 Pearse street, Dublin, by the members of the Irish Seamen's and Port Workers' Union employed by the Dublin Port Milling Company.

Up to the present there is every indication that the majority of the workers, who are members of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union in the city and country mills, are in favour of the offer.

It is expected that the results for the whole country will be available to-day.

Our Ballina Correspondent telegraphs that Messrs. Murphy's new flour mills at Ballina, which were to have opened yesterday morning after a week's holiday, remained closed in view of the ballot on the wages' increases offered by millers generally in the Saorstat to workers.

It is understood that the forty employés in the mill took a ballot on Sunday, and decided in favour of accepting the millers' terms. The result, however, had to be sent to Dublin.

CYCLISTS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

ONE KILLED, THE OTHER PARALYSED

Two cyclists, sheltering under an ash tree during a heavy storm at Higham Ferrers, Northants, last night, were struck by lightning.

Albert Richardson (29), of Marshalls road, Raunds, was killed outright, and his companion, a man named Wheatley, of Chelveston, was paralysed from the waist downwards. He was taken to his home, and is in a serious condition.

Richardson and Wheatley were returning to their homes from a Higham Ferrers boot factory, and were discovered by Wheatley's half-brother, who saw Wheatley crawling out of a ditch twenty yards from the tree.

TROOPS LEAVE FOR PALESTINE

ANOTHER CONTINGENT SAILS

Nearly 5,000 troops have left Southampton for Palestine since Saturday. Yesterday about 3,000 sailed in two ships—the Nevasa and the Laurentic.

On the Laurentic were the Headquarters' Staff and administrative units from Aldershot; the Headquarters' Staff, 3rd Infantry Brigade, from Bordon, Hants, and the Headquarters' Staff, 5th Division from Richmond, Yorks; and on the Nevasa, the 2nd Batt. East Yorkshire Regiment and the 2nd Batt. North Staffordshire Regiment.

The majority of the troops were young, and they looked remarkably fit. They had never seen foreign service, and were in high spirits as they embarked. There were many reservists, and Lieutenant-Colonel Robb, commanding the North Staffordshires, said: "Nearly half of my battalion are reservists. We have some from the Warwicks, the Worcesters, the Leicesters, the Sherwood Foresters, the Berkshires, and the South Staffords, and a fine lot of men they are, too."

The troops were given a great send-off, and among those who wished them luck were the Adjutant-General for the Forces, General Sir Harry Knox, the General Officer Commanding-in-Chief Aldershot Command; General the Hon. Sir J. Francis Gathorne-Hardy, and the Director of Military Operations and Intelligence, Major-General R. H. Haining

THROWN FROM 'BUS

FATAL DUBLIN ACCIDENT

PROTECTION FOR DOOR RECOMMENDED

DEATH from fracture of the skull was the verdict at an inquest in Jervis Street Hospital yesterday on Joseph Byrne (60), 20 Townsend street, who died in the hospital on Saturday night following an accident, in which, it was stated, he fell or was thrown from a 'bus.

Byrne, it was stated, had no relatives or friends.

Dr. Kieran, Jervis Street Hospital, stated that the deceased man, who was in a semi-conscious condition, had an extensive fracture of the skull.

John Clarke, 18 Swords street, Dublin, stated that while driving his car along Amiens street on Saturday night a 'bus approached him, going towards the city. When still some distance from him the 'bus swerved towards him and then swerved back again. It happened at the junction of Sheriff street, and it was so dark that he could not see what had caused it to swerve. The next thing witness noticed was that there was a man lying in front of his car. The man's head was badly injured. The 'bus was travelling in a perfectly ordinary way, and there was nothing reckless about it.

Catherine Delaney, 34 Sandford road, a passenger in the 'bus, described how she was thrown from her seat while travelling at a moderate pace along Amiens street.

Kathleen Allen, Convent of Mercy, Cork street, another passenger, stated that she saw a man walk out into the road almost under the 'bus, and although the swerve was not violent she was dazed. The driver of the 'bus, which was travelling moderately, had no alternative to killing the pedestrian but to swerve.

THROWN THROUGH ENTRANCE

Civic Guard T. Boyle, Carriage Department, who tested the vehicle, stated that it was quite a new 'bus (March, 1935), and was in almost perfect mechanical condition. It was the kind of accident that, in his opinion, would probably never happen again. If the man had not been leaning forward in his seat at the time been thrown through the entrance. He felt that there was no necessity for extra safety precautions at 'bus exits. In any case, it would be impractical.

Joseph Redmond, 27 St. Joseph square, Clontarf conductor of the 'bus, stated that on the way from Killester to the city he picked up the deceased man on the Howth road, and Byrne sat in the last seat. Byrne was quite sober. When going through Amiens street witness was standing near the door, and the 'bus suddenly swerved, witness being thrown against a seat. The man who had been sitting on the back seat was found lying on the road.

Mr. Sean Ryan, representing the Tramway Company, objected to the driver of the 'bus being called to give evidence in view of the possibility of his being involved in a criminal charge.

NEED FOR PROTECTION

Commenting on the evidence, the Coroner (Dr. D. A. MacErlean) suggested it was quite possible for a similar accident to happen again, and it would be advisable that a chain or some sort of protection should be provided at the exits of 'buses while in motion.

The jury added a rider to their verdict exonerating the driver of the 'bus from blame, suggesting that some protection should be provided for people occupying the back seat in a 'bus, and that the Corporation should take steps to improve the public lighting at the point where the accident occurred.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT

KNOCKED DOWN BY MOTOR CAR

RECKLESS DRIVING CHARGE DISMISSED

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

John Enright, Court View, Sandhill road, Ballybunion, Co. Kerry, was summoned for having, at Northumberland road, Dublin, driven a motor car in a manner dangerous to the public.

Mr. W. G. Bradley, solicitor, defended, and Mr. L. Trant McCarthy, solicitor, appeared for Joseph Corrigan, 57 Strand road, Sandymount, who was knocked down by the motor car on the occasion and injured.

Guard Hickey said that Enright stated that he was passing a 'bus when a number of people, of whom Corrigan was one, attempted to cross the road. Corrigan turned back, and he could not avoid knocking him down. Enright did not report the matter to the Guards until two days afterwards, stating then that he was suffering from shock and nerves.

Joseph Corrigan said that as he was crossing the road he was struck by some vehicle and knocked to the ground. He did not see the car before it struck him.

In reply to Mr. Bradley, solicitor, Corrigan said that he had not very good sight. He had been in hospital for a month as a result of the injuries he had sustained.

John Enright said that at the time of the occurrence he was travelling at 20 miles an hour. He pulled out to pass a stationary 'bus, and saw a number of men crossing the road. He sounded the horn and some of the men ran across. One of them ran back, and he could not avoid hitting him. If the men had all crossed the road together there would not have been an accident.

Mr. Hannan said that he had some doubt, and would, therefore, dismiss the summonses.

FATAL ROAD ACCIDENT

(BEFORE MR. E. J. LITTLE, D.J.)

William O'Dwyer, licensed trader, Irwin street, Kilmainham, was further remanded for one week on bail on a charge of the manslaughter of Thomas O'Reilly (52), a linesman on the Great Southern Railway, by running him down with a motor car at the junction of Cabra and Quarry roads on Saturday, 5th September. O'Reilly, who lived at Ballycarron, Enfield, Co. Meath, was cycling to the city.

A STOLEN WATCH

Christopher Kavanagh (25), a native of Kildare, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment, with hard labour, for breaking into the residence of Kathleen Thompson, 19 Lindsay road, and stealing a silver wristlet watch, value £2, and a bicycle lamp, value 3s. 9d. He was also charged with stealing from a motor car an overcoat, the property of Mr. Crean, veterinary surgeon, 5 Ellis's quay.

Informations were refused in the case of Patrick Allen and Mary Ryan, both of B Block, Iveagh Buildings, who were charged with receiving the watch knowing it to have been stolen.

DONATION BOXES ROBBED

Francis Bregan, Bridgefoot street, and Patrick Carr, Ccombe, were sentenced to two months' imprisonment each, with hard labour, for stealing £3 from donation boxes in the Mallin Hall, Fishamble street, Dublin. Bregan was sentenced to a further term of one month for begging.

The Justice ordered that the money found on the prisoners should be handed over to their wives, as the money was the proceeds of a charitable institution.

The Duke and Duchess of Kent, who have arrived in Munich from Yugo-Slavia, expect to leave by train for Paris to-day. They spent yesterday quietly at the Munich home of the Count and Countess Toering-Jettenbach brother-in-law and sister of the Duchess.

DUBLIN EASIER

GUINNESS DULL

IMPERIAL TOBACCOS WEAK

On the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday most attention was paid to local securities, but the tone in most sections was easier, British Industrials were quiet, and changes generally were against holders.

The Free State Loans held steady, and Land Bonds improved to 110¾, but the 4 p.c. Bonds dropped to 104¼. War Loan inclined easier.

Banks came in sellers, and Bank of Ireland gave way to 33¼, while Nationals and Provincial Old tended lower. Exceptionally on a little demand, Munster and Leinsters moved up to 116s.

Guinness, on some selling, lost 1s., but the market was a small one.

In rails, Great Southern Deb. hardened to 9¼.

Alliance Gas Ord. and Ranks (Ireland) Pref. were a shade lower, and Goodbody Ord. fell sharply to 24s. Goulding Ord., Carroll Pref. and May Roberts (Ireland) Ord. showed an easier trend. Independent Pref. gained 1s. 3d. at 31s. 3d.

Imperial Tobaccos relapsed 1s. 6d. to 165s. 6d. Coats Ord. hardened to 53s. 3d., but Courtaulds shaded off. Imperial Chemicals firmed up to 39s. 9d., and Vickers Ord. repeated 35s. 1½d.

LONDON IRREGULAR

INDUSTRIALS WEAKER

The London Stock markets started the second week of the account in quiet fashion, with prices showing a reactionary trend. The rather dull conditions which existed almost generally were due mainly to the fact that buying interest was restrained by the international situation. There was, however, a fair amount of liquidation in progress, and Kaffirs, which were offered on Cape account, weakened all round. Favourable movements in the Industrial market were also few and far between, and Oil shares were inclined to droop in sympathy with Mexican Eagles, which were adversely influenced by the proposed new mining oil laws in Mexico, under which foreign companies investing in Mexico would be compelled to invest 25 p.c. of their profits in that country.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Gilt-edged securities encountered very little support, but with investors showing no disposition to reduce their commitments the market remained steady. Quotations moved narrowly throughout the session, and apart from fractional losses in War Loan and Conversion 3½ p.c., closed unaltered.

FOREIGN BONDS.

Foreign Bonds attracted some support during the opening stages, and Germans, which were favoured on yield considerations and on the greater confidence felt in the future outlook of Germany, tended to advance further. Subsequently, interest slackened, and prices slipped back. At the finish Europeans were easier in places, and the only movement in Far Easterns was a shrinkage in Japanese 5½ p.c. Among South Americans, Peruvian Corporations received favourable attention and hardened.

RAILS.

Lack of support was responsible for dulness in British Rails, and though there was not much offering of stock L.M.S. Ord. and several other issues lost ground. Firmness of Great Western Ord. was attributable to the continued improvement in the company's position. Fresh buying of San Paulo Ord., which rose 1½ further to 64¼, was the chief point of interest in Foreign Rails. Colonial and American Rails were overshadowed by Wall Street advices, and among the former Canadas dropped ½ to 12¼.

INDUSTRIALS.

Support for Industrials was confined mainly to a few specialities, and the market closed on a dull note. The majority of recently active issues, such as Iron and Steels, Electrical Equipments, and Motors, weakened, and lower rates were quoted for Cement, Brewery, and Textile shares. Dull conditions prevailed also among trans-Atlantics. The best feature was buying of the shares of tailoring concerns on reports of increased trade. Prices Trust were particularly good on news of the firm's expansion programme, and Burtons also moved up.

MINES.

Firmness of Copper shares, which continued in demand on the better conditions in the industry, relieved the Mining groups from complete dulness. Sentiment in the Kaffir section was undermined by the recent Venterspost cable, while fears of a further fall in the price of gold accelerated the downward movement in values. West Wits. and Ventersposts went back sharply and substantial declines were marked in Goldfield, S.A. Lands, Libanon, and others. West Africans followed the lead of Kaffirs, and quotations for other Gold shares fluctuated unfavourably.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

IRREGULAR PRICE MOVEMENTS

Somewhat irregular conditions prevailed in the Industrial Market yesterday. Here and there moderate support was again forthcoming, but little disposition was seen to extend commitments. With Wall street in uncertain mood, the trans-Atlantic counters lost further ground. Nickels, Brazilian tractions, and Radios gave way. Cables and Wireless stocks continued a dull market.

An irregular tendency prevailed among Iron and Steel shares. A good feature was provided by Tube Investments, which rose 1s. Slightly lower prices ruled for Babcock and Wilcox, and Swan Hunter.

Parnalls provided an active feature among the Aircraft and Accessories, rising to 12s. 9d. in early dealings on rumours that the company had effected an advantageous settlement with the Air Ministry. Later, however, the shares reacted to 11s. 6d. owing to lack of confirmation. Slight gains were also registered in Handley Page and Bristols, but Rolls-Royce eased.

MOTORS NEGLECTED.

Motor and associated issues had a generally neglected appearance, and price changes, as a rule, were adverse to holders. Triplex Glass lost ⅛ owing to profit-taking. Among the "heavies," Leylands declined, Dennis lost further ground and Tillings reacted.

Electrical Equipments generally suffered from realisations. Enfield Cables provided an exception, the shares meeting with a fair demand, and recovering 6d.

GUINNESS DOWN.

Although support was not entirely lacking among Breweries, there were few fresh buyers about, and prices for the most part were allowed to sag. Guinness were marked down 1s. In the Alcohol section, Distillers eased. Little fresh interest developed in Tobaccos. Gallahers gained the turn, but "Imps" receded.

In the Drapery and Stores group, Woolworths slipped back further to 144s. 3d. and Marks and Spencers to 4¼.

Among Provision shares, Caron Sugar changed hands up to 8s. 6d. on the provisional agreement with Tate and Lyle. The shares of the latter company, however, were easier.

Textiles made a rather mixed showing. Patons and Baldwins and Coats lost ground. Among Rayons, Courtaulds gave way, but Suia Viscosa was firm.

BANK SHARES DULL.

Bank shares generally presented a rather dull appearance, and, with few exceptions, Insurance issues lost ground. Shipping shares remained on the quiet side.

Miscellaneous issues continued to move irregularly, and made a rather poor showing.

OILS SMALL.

Interest in the Oil Share Market yesterday centred mainly in Mexican Eagles. Reports were current of increased demands by the Mexican Government on the Mining and Oil industries, but no official confirmation was obtainable, and dealers attached little credence to the rumours. Nevertheless, public and professional operators offered the stock. As a result Mexican Eagles gave way to 27s. 10½d. At this point, however, fresh buyers came forward, and a rally occurred to 28s. 9d., while the final price of 28s. 7½d. left them unchanged on balance. Canadian Eagles fluctuated within narrower limits, and left off without alteration. Although comparatively quiet, Shells were well maintained, and Anglo-Iranians and Burmahs were steady. In other directions, Lobitos, V.O.C., and Trinidad Leaseholds eased.

RUBBERS IDLE

Although steady conditions prevailed in the commodity section, and spot rubber was maintained at 7½d. per lb., dealers in the Rubber share market yesterday found little to occupy their attention. Buyers were again conspicuous by their absence, and dealings were too limited to make any impression on share values. United Kingdom Rubber stocks were reduced by 1,814 tons last week.
